THE NAVAL REVIEW
King Travels To Portsmouth

London, July 15.
The King travelled to the outskirts of Portsmouth to-day by special train, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Duke of York and Kent, on his way to attend the Jubilee Review of the Navy off Spithead to-morrow afternoon. His Majesty proceeded through Portsmouth by motor car and was enthusiastically cheered by the great crowds lining the route. The King is spending the night on the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

It is expected at least a quarter of a million people will watch the review from shore and ships. Owing to pressure of Government business, the adjournment of the House of Commons to permit members to attend the review has not been possible, but a large group of members, including the Prime Minister, Mr. Baldwin, and the Lord President of Council, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, will be present.—British Wireless.

FIVE MILES OF WARSHIPS
When Fleet Parades For The King

(Special Air Mail Service)
London, July 2.
Eight lines of fighting ships, stretching away for five miles towards Southampton Water, will be moored off Spithead on Tuesday, July 16, when the King is to review the Fleet. This will be the greatest pageant of British seapower seen since the war.

At the head of the two centre lines will be the Nelson and the Queen Elizabeth, flagships of the Home Fleet and the Mediterranean Fleet respectively.

In all, there will be over 150 ships, manned by about 50,000 officers and men, or more than half the Navy's total personnel.

Not only has the greater part of the Mediterranean Fleet been recalled to home waters for the occasion, but many vessels of the Reserve Fleet are to be temporarily commissioned.

Further, to mark the affinity between the Royal Navy, the Merchant Navy and the Fishing Fleet as complementary elements of national defence, a number of representative merchantmen and fishing vessels have, by the King's command, been allotted stations at the review.

The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, preceded by the Trinity House yacht Patricia and followed by the Admiralty yacht Enchantress, will steam between the fourth and fifth lines, and return between the sixth and seventh to the starting-point near Horse Sand Fort.

As the yacht swings round through the lines it will pass the famous racing yachts, including Endeavour, Yankee, Candida, Astra, and Vita.

AIR FACILITIES FOR M.P.'S

London, July 15.
A scheme for the inclusion of air travel within the present arrangements by which members of Parliament visiting their constituencies on public business and receive free travelling facilities was announced in the House of Commons to-day.

Where suitable arrangements can be made, members desiring to go by air will be supplied with the necessary warrants to enable them on payment of excess over the first-class railway fare, to use approved air lines.—British Wireless.

BEEF SUBSIDY
Sixteen Months Extension

London, July 15.
In the House of Commons, introducing legislation extending the beef subsidy for a further sixteen months, Mr. Walter Elliot, Minister of Agriculture, said in the past few days they had secured a voluntary agreement with Australia and New Zealand which would govern the supplies of mutton and lamb to the British market to the end of 1936.

Mr. Walter Elliot

Arrangements have been made for supplies of frozen pork, excluding baconers, during the next six months. Definite arrangements for supplies of beef and veal have been made with Australia and New Zealand. They were beginning to tackle the difficult question of the entry of the Dominions into the chilled beef market.

These interlocking arrangements were precisely those which the Government desired to see carried through by agreement, and it was to bring them to a triumphant conclusion that further provision was necessary. When final agreement was reached, it was the intention that the Exchequer subsidy should be replaced by a levy subsidy.—British Wireless.

EXPERT ON CHINA
Sir Sidney Barton

(Special Air Mail Service)
London, July 2.
Sir Sidney Barton, the British Minister to Abyssinia, whose leave has been cancelled because of the serious situation there, is the leading Foreign Office expert on China.

Thirty-four years of his life were spent in that country, a large part of them in the capacity of Chinese Secretary to the British Legation.

He was political officer and interpreter to the British contingent in China during the Boxer war of 1900.

Sir Sidney did not take very kindly to the new post-war China. An imaginative Foreign Office promoter, him five years ago as Minister to Abyssinia.

DELICATE DIPLOMACY
Sir Sidney has a thorough understanding of the Oriental mind, and in Peking his expert knowledge of Chinese etiquette was invaluable.

His most difficult social problem arose out of the action of one of his compatriots.

He was once sent by his Minister to persuade the wife of an English official to refrain from using a highly decorated sedan chair which she had bought from a local dealer.

Sir Sidney pointed out that the chair was the type used by a Chinese courtesan. The lady, however, was recalcitrant. She was not prepared to give up her treasure.

It was only when Sir Sidney

"The user of alertness of mind".

writes Dr. C. L. Wheeler.

This is the opinion that medical men have of Sanatogen; and when it is remembered that more than 25,000 physicians have written about the gratifying results they have obtained with Sanatogen, it becomes evident that you can trust this really exceptional tonic to help you, too.

Prof. Mann, formerly of Oxford University, explained the reason for the wonderful influence of Sanatogen on health, in these words:

"A building-up process goes on in the nerves after the administration of Sanatogen."

Start improving your health to-day. Take Sanatogen, and notice how fatigue and nervousness disappear. Take Sanatogen, and in a few weeks you will feel and look better than you have done for years. Follow the advice of these physicians and enjoy once more that sense of youthful health.

FIRST WIRELESS SLANDER SUIT

Sequel To Talk On Drug Traffic

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 28.

The first action arising out of a broadcast talk was heard by Lord Hewart, the Lord Chief Justice, and a special jury in the King's Bench Division yesterday.

Mr. George Constantine Lambros, of Fairview Way, Edgware, sued the British Broadcasting Corporation for damages for alleged libel and slander. He complained of an article dealing with the drug traffic in Egypt which appeared in "The Listener" on June 20, 1934, after being broadcast on June 12.

The defence admitted that it was broadcast and printed, but denied that it concerned Mr. Lambros.

Sergeant Sullivan, K.C., for Mr. Lambros, said "Lambros" among the Greeks was a contraction of a popular Christian name. As a Christian name it was common, but as a surname it was extremely rare.

Mr. Lambros was born in Constantinople in 1888, his father being a naturalised British subject. For many years he was engaged in business which took him to Paris, the Mediterranean countries and the Near East.

ARRESTS IN CAIRO

The article complained of was headed: "Suppressing the drug traffic." "By Russell Pasha," and contained the following passages:

"One of our best coups this year was the Lambros case. Lambros was a Greek whom we have been after for years and had never been able to catch."

"When we eventually made our arrests in Cairo we searched Lambros's house, but, as usual, found nothing incriminating."

After referring to an examination of certain ledgers said to have been found in Lambros's office, the article proceeded:

"From them we got the names of 61 of Lambros's retailers, and proof that Lambros, in the space of two and a half years, had sold hashish to the value of £100,000, and heroin to the value of £112,000."

"Eleven local accused got five years' imprisonment and £1,000 fine over this case, and Lambros got a year and deportation from his Consular Court."

"Because of his travels and activities in business in various parts of the world," said Sergeant Sullivan, "Mr. Lambros, although perfectly innocent of the matters referred to in the article, 'fitted the bill'."

Mr. Lambros, giving evidence, said he had been Consul in Crete, and continued:

"I know of no family in Constantinople of the name of Lambros except mine."

He eventually discovered that the man to whom the article really referred was one named Lambros Yannicos.

Cross-examined by Mr. Norman Birkett, K.C., for the B.B.C., Mr. Lambros would not agree that the Corporation had done all it could by explanations in "The Listener" and over the wireless to remove any impression that he was the person referred to in the article.

NEIGHBOUR WHO HEARD

Mrs. Mary Wilson, of Fairview Way, Edgware, said she heard the wireless talk. Mr. Lambros had often spoken to her husband about his experiences in Greece and elsewhere and, talking to her husband after the wireless talk, she said: "Now we know what Lambros has been up to." (Laughter.)

For the defence, Sir John Stirling, solicitor, of Devonshire Square, Bishopsgate, E.C., formerly Consul-General for Greece in the United Kingdom, said Lambros was a well-known surname both in Greece and in Egypt.

Counsel read the evidence of Russell Pasha, the director of the Central Narcotics Intelligence Bureau, the author of the article. In this he said the story he told was about the activities of Lambros Yannicos. He had never heard of Mr. Lambros, the plaintiff.

Lambros Yannicos was a family word in the narcotic traffic. That man had, for many years, been known as the most important drug trafficker in Egypt.

THE ROBOT AIRPLANE

With Nobody On Board

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 28.

The Robot airplane is here: the airplane which can fly without any person on board. It can—Fly at more than 100 m.p.h. Rise to more than 10,000ft. And is operated entirely by radio.

This triumph is the result of 10 years of unremitting research by the Technical Department of the Air Ministry.

For the last 12 months tests have been carried out in secret, and pilotless biplanes have been taking off, climbing, turning, and performing all the normal evolutions of a machine as if it were in the hands of a skilled pilot, including the approach and perfect landings—and all by means of remote radio control.

TARGET PRACTICE

A special flight has now been formed to enable pilotless planes to carry out target practice.

The machines will be seen by the public for the first time in the park devoted to new and experimental types at the Royal Air Force Display at Hendon aerodrome next Saturday. But no flights will be made.

The main function of the pilotless airplane, so far as the R.A.F. is concerned, is to provide a target at which live ammunition can be fired by anti-aircraft guns.

This has actually been done, largely with the Fleet and at places where the live shells cannot fall on inhabited areas.

The flying target is known officially as the "Queen Bee." The machines are based on the design of the Tiger Moth, and are very similar in appearance. They have been constructed by the De Havilland Aircraft Company, are powered with Gipsy 130 h.p. air-cooled motors, and possess the range and speed of a normal light airplane of the Tiger or Gipsy Moth type.

FROM SEA OR LAND

They have been used with landing wheels for normal take-off flights from aerodromes, and have also been fitted with floats for catapulting from aircraft carriers.

In both cases, the radio-controlled machine without a human crew has taken off and landed satisfactorily.

The Queen Bee is controlled by radio operated from ship or battery. The machines are used, of course, in a "closed circuit," and not for long flights on a compass course to distant objectives.

The maximum radius in the "closed circuit" is not more than 10 miles from the operating centre.

The aircraft are purely target machines, and are not designed for any other purpose. They can change their altitude, guided by radio, thus setting target problems for the gunners.

MALACCA BEATEN BY AN INNINGS

Sukumaren's Fine Bowling

Malacca, July 7. Negri Sembilan concluded their inter-State cricket fixture here by beating Malacca by an innings and nine runs.

The Negri declared their first innings closed at 181. Malacca started fairly well, but Sukumaren made havoc among the tall and finished up with the analysis of five for 31, which included the hat trick.

All out for 77, Malacca followed on, but did little better, being all out for 95. Sukumaren was again the bowler to cause most of the trouble and he captured five wickets for 22, making his total for the match 10 for 53.

Malacca came out to field this morning without de Vries, who was indisposed, and James a St. Francis schoolboy, deputised as wicket-keeper.

The resumption saw cautious Negri batting, the first quarter of an hour's play yielding only one run.

Colville then bowled Senaviratne (six for 153). The same bowler obtained Captain Young's wicket for nought (seven for 157). De Vries then gave a catch to Sukumaren off Colville for nought (eight for 166).

The Negri declared at 181 for eight. Salmon was 25 not out in a hard hit, if chancy, innings. Colville bowled excellently this morning, returning six overs, three wickets, nine runs.

The Malacca opening pair, Burnham and de Vries batted brightly till Burnham was run out by Shields (one for 5). Without addition to the score Chandrapala was splendidly stumped first ball by Young off Sukumaren (two for 15).

BRISK SCORING

James then became associated with de Vries and the score mounted briskly. De Vries, leg glancing Sukumaren for four, sent up the 50 in 45 minutes.

James was caught behind the wicket off the last ball before lunch. He played attractively for 18 in his first big match.

Lunch was taken with the score at 55 for three. The resumption saw the Malacca wickets tumble. Witherby was bowled by de Silva (four for 57). De Vries was taken smartly behind the stumps by Young off de Silva after scoring 24 (five for 58).

A collapse then followed the last five wickets falling for 19 runs. Sukumaren, in capturing the wickets of Ibrahim, Rogers and Colville with consecutive deliveries performed the hat trick.

Malacca were all out at 3 p.m. for 77.

MALACCA FOLLOW ON

Malacca followed on and Burnham and de Vries again batted brightly. Burnham was caught by Young after scoring 11 (one for 14). James was next to go run out (two for 33). Cooper was caught by Salmon skying de Silva (three for 49).

De Vries sent up the 50 in 40 minutes. Rogers was caught behind the wicket (four for 55). Chandrapala was bowled by Sukumaren for two (five for 66). de Vries was at last bowled by de Silva with a lovely leg break for a well-compiled 44, which included five boundaries in an hour's stay (six for 72).

De Silva, with his next delivery bowled Witherby (seven for 72). Kong Yen returned the ball to Sukumaren (eight for 79). Rodrigues raised de Silva on to the pavilion roof to send up 90, but Ibrahim was then out to a magnificent one-handed catch by Shields off Sukumaren (nine for 91).

Tea was taken with the score 95 for 9. The innings was ended without addition to the score.

BOBBY JONES'S TRIBUTE

To Miss Wethered

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 26. "Miss Wethered is one of the best players in the world," said Bobby Jones after her magnificent play in an 18 holes exhibition match at Atlanta, Georgia, yesterday.

She and Charles Yates, the U.S. inter-collegiate champion, finished all-square with Jones and Miss Dorothy Kirby, a 15-year-old girl player from Georgia, on Jones's home course.

Miss Wethered had three birdies during the outward half which she did in 36, equalling the men's par figures.

Jones also had three birdies in his outward figures and returned a score of 34 for the nine holes—two under par.

Miss Wethered returned in 38 and Jones in 37, the par for this half being 35.

"She muffed only two iron shots, this being due to her unfamiliarity with the Bermuda grass. Her putting, however, was remarkable. Jones will now be operated on for appendicitis.

He has been suffering from this trouble for some time, but had postponed the operation until he had had a chance of playing a match with Miss Wethered.

JAPANESE COMPETITION

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 26.

When the Congo Basin Treaties come up for reconsideration this year much will likely be heard about the rapid penetration of former British markets in Kenya, Tanganyika, and Uganda, by the Japanese. Lancashire textile exporters have already approached the Government on the subject, with a view to examining the possibilities of obtaining some revision of the treaties which might safeguard their interests against the increasing competition of Japan. Britain, France, Japan, Belgium, the Portugal, the all the nations in the vast Africa trade some, under the Convention of 1906, Germany and Japan are permitted to win the trade in those vast markets, which were opened up by British capital.

GUN BATTLE IN SINGAPORE

Singapore, June 26. Two 25-year-old London men led a police posse to-day in a fierce daylight gun battle against Chinese gangsters outside the naval base.

The gangsters were captured. All the police escaped without injury. The London men were Assistant Superintendents N. G. Norris and D. G. Broadhurst.

Mr. Norris's home is at Earl's Court.

Mr. Broadhurst is the younger son of Major J. F. Broadhurst, former Chief of Police at Jaffa and Tel Aviv, Palestine, who now lives in Claremont-road, Ealing. Major Broadhurst, retired in 1932 after thirty-three years' service in the military police.

Norris was best man at Douglas Broadhurst's wedding in Guernsey last year.

THE THINKING VOTE

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 26.

By a five-to-one majority on a large poll the Scottish Universities have sent a supporter of the National Government to Westminster. Socialists will say that the figures are further proof that the Tories are Tory preservers. But Socialists also say that the Tory party is the stupid party and that all people who know how to think realise that society must be reconstructed on Socialist lines. Both arguments have a certain effectiveness for propaganda purposes. But they cannot be true together.

Least of all in Scotland. There, thanks partly to the country's fine educational tradition and partly to the influence of Andrew Carnegie, the Universities are not only the most intelligent and best educated in the land, but also the most progressive. His vote has revealed his thought.

Behind The Screen In Hollywood

One of the world's leading actresses, in fact, according to some critics, the world's leading actress—has never been within three thousand miles of Hollywood, and probably will never come to Hollywood, in spite of the fact that she has had many tempting offers. This young lady, as the reader has probably guessed, is none other than Elisabeth Bergner, whose newest picture, "Escape Me Never," recently played a premiere performance before thousands of enthusiastic movie fans at the Radio City Music Hall, the biggest and most palatial of all the world's cinemas.

It is her second film to be generally released in the United States, and with it Miss Bergner becomes definitely established as one of the screen's most prominent figures. Rarely has an actor or actress achieved an ascendancy so rapid as has this Continental star with her portrayal of Gemma Jones in the screen version of the famous play which had such a brilliant season in London last year.

The sensational reception of "Escape Me Never" in New York re-echoed the thunderous applause that greeted this British & Dominions film at the London Pavilion Theatre in London, where it enjoyed a phenomenal run.

"ESCAPE ME NEVER"

It is a little over a year since Elisabeth Bergner made her debut on the screen in the theatres of the world. That was in "Catherine the Great," the London Films production in which she played the role of Russia's famous Empress. The portrayal won for her a prominent place among the annual selections for the ten best performances, and the film as a vehicle for her talents was rated a box office success everywhere.

But the engagement of "Escape Me Never" at the Radio City Music Hall was only one day old when it became apparent from the waiting lines of film fans that Elisabeth Bergner ranked with America's leading screen stars in point of popularity. The consensus of motion picture opinion is that no star has ever achieved so completely personal a triumph.

On her departure from New York several weeks ago, Miss Bergner stated that she will never make a picture in Hollywood, and that her meter is Continental rather than that of the Western world.

Miss Bergner's support in "Escape Me Never" includes three of the players who appeared with her in the London and New York stage success of the same name. The production was directed by Dr. Paul Czinner, who also directed her in "Catherine the Great."

One of the most widely discussed pictures in Hollywood, and at the same time one whose plot, action and setting is least known, is Charlie Chaplin's new film tentatively called "Production No. 5." The first preview of this production will take place soon, affording Hollywood its first full knowledge of one of its most prideful products—a new Charlie Chaplin picture.

The final exteriors of the film have been finished at San Pedro, California, and they involve what is perhaps the greatest number of persons ever utilized in a Chaplin screen play. The scenes called for the employment of 394 extras, in addition to a score of principal players.

Details of the production are still being guarded with maximum secrecy, the only important fact announced being that Chaplin will maintain his traditional silence on the screen and will utilize only pantomime.

Paulette Goddard, selected by the star as of the screen's most promising artists, plays the leading feminine role.

The Above Have Arrived...

Sea-travellers know the White Star Line, the Blue Star Line, the Red Star Line; Gaumont-British are seriously considering the establishment of a Film Star Line; to transport from the U.S.A. to England the numerous stars, who, under the admirable arrangements for international exchange of talent recently made by Mr. Michael Balcon, Director of productions, are arriving in London.

The past week has seen the arrival of Richard Dix, to play in "The Tunnel." Mr. Dix made the trip from New York in the giant French liner "Normandie," and was followed the next day by Madge Evans, in the Cunarder "Aquitania." Miss Evans will also star in "The Tunnel." Walter Huston is due in during the week in the "Majestic." Cunard-White Star line; and future arrivals include C. Aubrey Smith and Maureen O'Sullivan to appear in "Soldiers Three," and Peter Lorre for Alfred Hitchcock's "Assenden" film.

A DERBY-DAY MEMORY

Richard Dix "breezed" into London with terrific gusto. He was delighted to re-visit the scene of his work ten years ago, in "The Christian," and recalled many amusing incidents of that early production. "We were the first unit ever to have a full location in Trafalgar Square," he related. "All our cameras had to be hidden; but there was no possibility of hiding the numbers of powerful lamps we used. We had secured almost every available studio-lamp in Britain so huge was the scene we had to cover. Then I remember nearly being arrested in the Paddock at Epsom, where, on Derby Day, I had to do a scene of tremendous gestures and sweeping gesticulations. The assistant-director had marked the spot where I was to stand by dropping a handful of white lead on the grass; I took up my stand, and started 'doing my stuff.' It was in close proximity to the Royal Box, where their Majesties were already seated. Two policemen converged on me, walked round me, studied me. Then said one 'copper to the other: 'Crikey, Bill, the blighter's barmy!' With which they walked off and left me to rave and rant to my heart's content!"

Mr. Dix' first concern on reaching his hotel was to telephone his wife in Los Angeles. Mrs. Dix, it will be remembered, presented Richard with twin boys less than five weeks ago. He reports that the connection with Los Angeles—more than 6,000 miles—was made exactly eight minutes after he first asked the London exchange for his home-number. "A fine bit of work," he adds. "Judging by the complaints of certain London friends of mine, the best thing to do when you want to tell your wife at Wimbledon that you won't be home to dinner, would be to ring up Hollywood, and ask them to call Wimbledon for you. Saves time, it appears!"

Dix is now busily engaged seeing London, conferring with his Director, Maurice Elvey, and carrying out his usual programme of physical training. "I like to get a gymnasium 'work-out' each morning," he says. "First thing I did when I left the hotel after my first meal in London was to go in search of a 'gym.'"

This Sometimes Happens

A gardening expert has written a book on cabbages. Surely paper would have been cheaper.

Acme of Styles

"Those shoes I bought from you are too flimsy to walk in." "Our establishment, madam, does not pretend to cater for pedestrians."

What Price Politeness?

"And remember, politeness costs nothing." "Doesn't it? Just try putting a remain your obedient servant at the end of a telegram!"

Spring!

"I can assure you," said the philosopher, "that a woman's thoughts rise above dress." "That's right," agreed the other. "She's probably thinking of a new dress."

Marian Marsh, Columbia player, taught dancing when she was ten years old.

FANCY THIS

Boris Karloff was once classed as a French-Canadian "type" on the stage. He played a number of such roles.

Lambert Hillyer, Columbia director, makes deep-sea fishing rods as a hobby.

DIRECTOR IN HIDING

Victor Schertzinger is seldom seen by his friends lately, virtually living in the cutting rooms at Columbia Studios where he is supervising the editing of Grace Moore's "Love Me Forever."

HAT COLLECTOR

George Murphy, who just completed the lead in Columbia's "After the Dance," has an interesting collection of the hats of many nations.

ETCHES ON THE SIDE

Erle Kenton, Columbia director, makes etchings for his own pleasure.

SHE WHO GOT WHACKED!

Madge Evans, the beautiful MGM. star who arrived the day following, is also paying a return-trip to England. Both her parents were Liverpool-born, and she has a 'flock of relations' in the North of England. Miss Evans who is 23, unmarried, un-engaged, and is probably one of the few Hollywood stars who has not succumbed to the prevailing fashion for lacquered finger-and-toenails, recalls a previous visit, made six years ago as part of a tour of Europe. "I went everywhere with a girl-cousin of mine," she says, "who is now married to a well-known British film-man, and who met me at the boat on this occasion. We recalled that on the previous trip, I, being two years older than my cousin, affected great superiority, much to her rage. So much did I annoy her that eventually she signified her disapproval of my frequent nose-powderings, preening, prinkings and other adolescent vanities by catching me a sock over the shins with a hockey-stick!"

Miss Evans hopes, if her work allows her some spare time before her return to Hollywood engagements, to pay a visit to the Liverpool district and look up some of her English relatives.

GARY COOPER NEEDS ARTISTS

Paramount's Hollywood studios have sent out an "S.O.S." for artists—amateur or professional—who can help Gary Cooper in his "Peter Ibbetson" part.

They are invited either to sketch the star as they believe he should look with an additional 50 years on his shoulders, or to doctor up one of his photographs.

In the brief final sequences of de Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson," Cooper is to appear as an aged man, at least 80 years old.

Time is short as the picture is scheduled to start in two weeks, and the Paramount make-up experts so far confess themselves baffled.

Great Kipling Production

Rudyard Kipling, famous British novelist, playwright and poet, has approved the film version of "The Light That Failed," which Paramount is making in Hollywood from his story of the same title.

Mr. Kipling is enthusiastic about the possibilities of the picture—particularly as the film script adheres faithfully to the original story.

The script was prepared by Sidney Howard, the American playwright who wrote "The Silver Cord." Mr. Howard is a great admirer of Kipling's works and jumped at the chance of adapting this story.

Gary Cooper will play the leading part of Dick Helder—a role that is essentially suited to him, for Paramount plan to make "The Light That Failed" on patriotic and sincere lines like the famous "The Lives Of A Bengal Lancer."

The story of "The Light That Failed" concerns a young artist whose eyes are affected by a sabre cut during a rising in the Sudan. When the fighting is over he returns to England and finds that his wartime pictures have made him famous. He meets Maisie, his childhood sweetheart, and their love is revived.

Dick begins to paint a great picture, but quarrels with Maisie over a misunderstanding, on her part, and finally becomes blind as the result of his old wound. War breaks out. Dick manages to get into the fighting and is killed.

It is interesting to recall that ten years ago Paramount made a silent version of "The Light That Failed," with Percy Marmont, Jacqueline Logan, Sigrid Holmquist and David Torrence in the cast.

CINEMA TRADE NOTICES

IT'S A SMALL WORLD

For years, Spencer Tracy, the movie star, wanted a scar! He envied the German duelling students their privilege of being slashed down the face with a wound that would be indelible.

Now Spencer has realized his ambition.

On his face is a scar, barely noticeable to the casual eye, invisible on the screen. But it's there. Spencer's happy.

The scar is the result of his recent skirmish with a dinner plate, tossed by Wendy Barrie in a scene in their new Fox Film comedy, "It's A Small World," which comes on Saturday to the King's Theatre.

The plate cut an inch long gash in his forehead that took four stitches to close. The doctor warned him that a small scar might result. True enough! When the bandages were removed, he had a little white line between his eyes for a memento.

"And to think of all the spills I've taken playing polo without even a scratch to show for them," said Tracy. "A dinner plate got me the scar I've always wanted."

BABY FACE HARRINGTON

There have been more pretentious ones, but there has never been in years a better comedy filmed than "Baby Face Harrington" the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production introducing the comedy team of Charles Butterworth and Una Merkel having its initial showings to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre.

Swift, nimble and extremely funny, the new picture reflects utmost praise on its producer, Edgar Selwyn; director, Raoul Walsh and—most of all—the excellent cast.

Charles Butterworth is Willie Harrington, a small-town clerk. Una Merkel is his socially ambitious wife. Trying to be the man she thinks him, Willie gets involved with a band of the toughest outlaws ever to man a machine gun. He lands in jail, and the outlaws extricate him, only to hold him captive at their hide-out. Meanwhile a blood-chilling man hunt is on for his arrest.

"YOU BELONG TO ME"

At The Alhambra

At the Alhambra Theatre yesterday Lee Tracy, the wise-cracking comedian of the silver screen, entertained audiences with some last talking in "You Belong to Me," which had its premier showing. The picture is fast moving, and in a story that has an intricate plot, Tracy excels himself. He is supported by Helen Mack, who has the misfortune to be married to a cheap, double-crossing dancer, and through the efforts of Tracy the picture ends in a happy and satisfactory climax, but not before many complicated sequences have had to be disentangled.

Although Tracy is as jaunty as usual, this picture takes him away from his usual newspaper reporter roles, and affords him plenty of opportunity for considerable comic acting.

The picture is entertaining, and lovers of Tracy, the wise-cracker, should not miss it. "Reducum."

THE QUEEN'S

West Of The Pecos

"West of the Pecos" which is having its run at the Queen's Theatre is a fine western picture packed with thrills and excitement.

The story concerns the winning of the West. It opens at the close of the Civil War when Col. Lambeth and his daughter Terrill decides to start life afresh and meets Pecos as he is leaving a cantina after killing a man.

Later he joins their outfit and shares with them the perils of the Indian attacks. Despite the disguise of Terrill, as a boy the romance quickly ripens.

Comedy relief is thrown into this exciting and fast shooting picture where Richard Dix is seen at his best in the role of a bad man.

Others in the cast are Martha Sleeper, Fred Kohler, Sam Hinds and others.

The picture is above the average of the usual westerns. It is as delightful as it is exciting, and romantic. "O. M. O."

BABOONA

At The King's

Without a doubt one of the most astounding revelations of the motion picture era, is the new Martin Johnson adventure film, "Baboona," now at the King's Theatre.

It is the guess of this reviewer that "Baboona" will furnish you with the biggest thrills, the most engaging "real life" comedy and the most compelling adventure sequences you have ever beheld on a screen.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson the greatest present-day explorers of wild lands have dazzled the world time and time again with their exploits, and with their photographic records of gigantic conquests against tremendous odds. But "Baboona" relegates to second place anything that they or anyone else has ever brought out of the jungle!

This time the Johnsons conquer the jungles, the unexplored lands, the unknown people, from the air. Touring the fastnesses of Africa in their two planes, "The Spirit of Africa" and "Osa's Ark," they look down into an inferno of unexplored lands, unbelievable and fantastic to civilized eyes. In every sense, "Baboona" is extraordinary. Surpassing anything that has gone before it, this aerial epic over Africa stands forth as a masterpiece. If any motion picture released within the past five years warrants "road-showing" or a $2 box-office scale, "Baboona" does so. Yet Fox has released it direct to regular motion picture theatres.

More than twenty months were required in the making of "Baboona," it is stated, and the Johnsons flew some 60,000 miles above Africa while securing the film. Their adventures give added significance to the saying that truth is stranger than fiction, for here is a triumph of reality.

£3,000 PROFIT FROM BIG FIGHT

Petersen Gets £4,000

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 2.

The takings at Wembley Stadium for the Petersen-Neusel fight on Tuesday were over £18,000. This sum will yield a profit of about £3,000, writes a correspondent.

I learn that Petersen, though he lost, will receive a purse of about £4,000. Neusel's share will be £3,000.

Mr. A. J. Elvin, managing director of Wembley Stadium, who gave me the figures of the takings, said that he estimated that the weather reduced receipts by quite £10,000.

"We should probably have attracted another 25,000 people in the weather," he told me. "It is remarkable that there were 25,000 fans in our case, particularly the largest number in the history of the stadium."

The strike and the general sense of gloom my first big opening boxing performance have made the odds before, pushing ahead with another.

BRITISH FILM ACTOR SUED

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29.

A suit for £4,000 has been started against Mr. Collin Clive, the British stage and film actor, by Mr. Frank Zeitlin, a New York theatrical agent.

Mr. Zeitlin contends that under an agreement of May, 1932, he became Mr. Clive's manager with a right to 10 per cent. of his earnings.

Since that date, Mr. Zeitlin claims, Mr. Clive has earned £40,000, but has refused to give him an accounting.

WOMEN ARE BETTER IN BUSINESS

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29.

As an employer of labour—he manufactures soft goods—Glasgow's Lord Provost, Sir Alexander Swan, prefers women to men workers.

"Women are far easier to work with than men," he told a mixed company of students at a prize-giving yesterday in Skerry's College, Glasgow. "Women," he went on, "are far more pleasant than men in my experience; their brows do not go down so often as the other sex's. Besides, they do not have so many outside interests as the younger male element and apply themselves better to their jobs."

"I have been associated in my business career with 25 per cent. female labour... and I find girls nice to have about. It makes one feel young."

An inquiry into the circumstances attending the death of Ngai Wah (30), a building contractor of 602 Canton Road, second floor, was held at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon, with Mr. S. F. Balfour sitting as Coroner, when it was revealed that the deceased had fallen down the stairway of No. 14 Shanghai Street, on June 6 receiving a fractured neck and skull as a result of the fall.

In evidence Inspector A. J. W. Dorling, C.I.D. Kowloon, said that as a result of a message sent by Tsun Yap, a widow of No. 14 Shanghai Street, received in the afternoon of June 7, he went to the Kowloon Hospital where he saw a Chinese male, Ngai Wah in a ward. Through an interpreter he questioned the injured man who said that he had visited Wong Ping Yue at Shanghai Street to raise a loan, but was refused by the latter.

They had a quarrel, which was followed by blows and during the fight he, Ngai Wah, fell down the stairs. They were no other persons engaged in the fight.

Inspector Dorling then said that he could not get anything else from his informant who became delirious although he waited a further hour at the hospital before departing.

The next day in the presence of Tsun Yap, at the Kowloon Mortuary the deceased was identified by two Chinese males, Lam Tam and Ngai Hing.

Earlier in the proceedings Tsun Yap gave evidence that she saw the deceased with her nephew, Wong Ping Yue in a cubicle. She did not hear or see them fight nor hear any noise whatsoever. She saw the deceased lying on the ground at the bottom of the stairs. Her nephew ran downstairs and obtained a ricksha which conveyed the injured man away.

Her nephew spent that night in the house, and then went away. She had not heard from him since. Wong Ching, married woman of the same address testified that she saw a man whom she did not recognize, go and obtain a ricksha in which to take away the injured man. She did not know the deceased or Wong Ping Yue, and she had not heard any quarrelling that day.

Dr. Griffiths, whose evidence was the first taken in Court, said that when the injured man was admitted into the Kowloon Hospital he complained of a numbness which he (Dr. Griffiths) diagnosed as a fractured neck. Deceased died the next day, and at the post mortem he found that in addition deceased was suffering from a fractured skull.

Summing up the evidence, the Coroner said: "I return an open verdict. Death was due to injuries received through falling down the stairway of No. 14 Shanghai Street. There is no evidence to show how he came to fall down the stairs."

ASSAULT CHARGE

Charged with assaulting three persons in three different places and on three consecutive days, Tam Li, 18, unemployed was brought before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon when Detective Sergeant Fitches appeared for the prosecution.

The three complainants were Leung Luk and Li Tsat, kept women, and Lau Wai-man, a tailor who has a shop in Wanchai.

It was stated that the first two complainants were formerly inmates of a sly brothel for whom the defendant acted as tout. For some time now the women had been kept by sailors and as a result they could not keep up with the payment they formerly made to the defendant and other members of his gang. That, the prosecution contended, was the cause of the assault. It was alleged that the third complainant became involved in the case as he had something to do with the girls and after formal evidence was taken the case was remanded, the next hearing being fixed for to-morrow afternoon.

Appearing before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court yesterday on a charge of the possession of 51 po-pu lottery tickets, a complainant, Mak Tung-li, 41, pleaded guilty and was fined $20. The tickets were ordered to be destroyed. The man was arrested on information at Hollywood Road, near Peel Street, yesterday.

PRIVILEGE ABUSED

Given permission to wait for their friends inside the Ferry Wharf, two students, Kwong Man Hong and Lam Yiu Kawi, both 17 years old, abused this privilege by boarding ferries which brought them to Hong Kong without payment of their fares.

Taken before Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday they were remanded in police custody for 24 hours to enable their parents to appear before the Court.

Inspector Stimson, who prosecuted stated that the two boys received permission to go on the Star Ferry wharf about 10:40 last night to wait for their friends, but the first accused was seen to board a ferry and was followed. Later the second accused boarded another ferry and he was also followed. Both boys were questioned on the Hong Kong wharf and subsequently taken back to Kowloon where they were identified by one of the ticket inspectors.

Mr. A. E. Ainsworth, ticket inspector of the Star Ferry, appeared as complainant and said: "I ask Your Worship to take a serious view of this case, as the Star Ferry grants the public the privilege of waiting for friends on the wharf and if the public are going to abuse that privilege, the Company will have to take action."

First accused said he lived with second accused at High Street. Last night they both crossed the harbour to see a show, after which they went and had something to eat. When they wanted to come back to Hong Kong, the second defendant found that he had lost all his money.

THEFT OF RADIATOR CAP

Sentence of three months' hard labour was yesterday imposed on Lui Yam Ho, a 30 year old unemployed when convicted by Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy for receiving a stolen radiator cap from a car belonging to Traffic Sergeant Jamieson parked outside the Shamshui Police Station.

According to Inspector Ellis defendant was found in Mongkok with the radiator cap in his possession. Subsequently he took the Police to where he stole the article.

Sentence of three months' hard labour was also passed upon Li Cho, 41, unemployed, charged with unlawful possession of a stolen radiator cap at Nathan Road near Arran Street on Monday.

Defendant said he met a man who promised to get him some work. This man, defendant alleged, put the radiator cap into his pocket and went off.

Inspector Portallion, who prosecuted, stated that the owner of the stolen article had not been traced.

Two unemployed men, Fung Kwai, 25, and Lai Ho, 17, were sentenced to one month's hard labour each by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday for theft of a quantity of scrap iron from Bailey's shipyard. Sub-Inspector Welan said defendants were seen carrying the iron on a pole and were questioned. The iron was later traced to Bailey's shipyard. It was alleged that the two men entered the shipyard by walking round the seawall at low tide. Mr. S. A. Sweet, yard superintendent, stated that quite a lot of these thefts had been committed recently.

Brought before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Magistracy yesterday for stealing a pair of black silk stockings from the hosiery department of Sincere Company, a coolie, Wong Wing, 32, was bound over. Sub-Inspector Smith prosecuted.

A seamstress was the cause of a fight between two street coolies, Wong Cheong and Chan Kiu, yesterday. Brought before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Police Court yesterday both men were bound over to keep the peace for one year. Wong Cheong stated he gave a pair of trousers to a seamstress to be mended and Chan Kiu "pulled his leg" about the seamstress being his (Wong Cheong's) sweetheart. So they had a row. A bamboo pole was used and Wong Cheong received a slight cut on the head. Sub-Inspector A. W. Smith prosecuted.

Tam Kwong, unemployed, was sentenced to six months' hard labour by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday on a charge of having returned from banishment. Defendant was only

BIRTHDAY

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 28.

For twenty-four years the Women's Freedom League has celebrated the birthday of its first president, Mrs. Despard, by giving her a party, and ever since she went to live in Ireland some years ago Mrs. Despard has crossed the Channel to be entertained at the party, which is also a meeting and which is always held in Caxton Hall, the scene of many a suffrage demonstration.

She was there to-night to receive the congratulations of Mrs. Petrick-Lawrence, Miss Florence Underwood, Miss Anna Hunro, and other comrades of the old battles, the homage of organised Indian women from Mrs. Rama Rau, who assured her that she has inspired them in their fight for equality, and a shy tribute from a member of the Junior League.

Old Vibrant Energy

Written messages of affection came from Miss Margaret Bond field, Mrs. Tate (who is still suffering from the effects of her motor accident), and from Miss Horniman, who said she did wish Mrs. Despard would have her portrait painted. There is a picture that bears a remarkable resemblance to Mrs. Despard, "St. Geneyieve Keeping Watch Over Paris," one of the Fyfe's De Chavannes series in the Pantheon, but it is strange that no one has chosen to paint Mrs. Despard. She spoke with a tired voice to-night when she dwelt on the unhappiness of the world, the unnecessary suffering of children, the land that lies idle in Ireland, where men are land-hungry, and the menace of war.

WEDDING OF SIR HERBERT
SAMUEL'S DAUGHTER

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29.

Miss Nancy Samuel, only daughter of Sir Herbert and Lady Samuel, was married at the New West End Synagogue Bayswater, London, to Dr. Arthur Gabriel Salaman, second son of Dr. Redcliffe N. Salaman, of Homestall Barley, Herts.

Miss Samuel, in white satin with a long train and veil of net, arrived with her father, and among her attendants was a group of tiny girls. A large crowd waited outside the synagogue during the ceremony and waved their good wishes to the couple as they drove away.

A graduate of Oxford, Miss Samuel is a student of politics and sociology. She has travelled widely, and accompanied her father to Palestine when he was High Commissioner there. In 1929, in order to learn something of the working conditions of American shop girls, she worked for some time behind the counter of a Fifth Avenue store in New York.

Dr. Salaman was elected an L.R.C.P. two years ago. His father is director of the potato virus research station at Cambridge and president of the Jewish Health Organisation of Great Britain.

But, standing erect in her slim grey gown, with the lace mantilla over her grey hair, she looked much as she did in pre-war years, when she spoke from the plinth in Trafalgar Square. There was the same keen glance, the same determined set of the lips, and much of the old vibrant energy.

The Basis Of International Peace

Mr. She Addresses Rotarians

SEEK THE KINGDOM OF PEACE

"The Basis Of International Peace" was the subject of an interesting address delivered by Mr. George She at the weekly luncheon of the Hong Kong Rotary Club, held at the Hong Kong Hotel yesterday when Prof. L. Foster presided.

Rotarian O. Eager was welcomed as a new member and other guests present were: Messrs. R. A. D. Forrest, D. F. Davies and C. Y. Kwan.

The speaker was introduced to the gathering by the president who said that the subject on which Mr. She was going to speak was the continuation of an address he delivered some months ago. There had been no opportunity between then and now for Mr. She to complete his talk.

Mr. She, the president said, had been in Europe for the last six years and was in every way a qualified speaker on the subject as his lot in Europe had thrown him in with many prominent political people. Mr. She was also a great believer of the social system and his talk that afternoon was first hand and in every way authoritative.

The Race Of Armaments

Addressing the gathering Mr. She said:—

I keenly appreciate the honour of being invited again to address you on a topic which is uppermost in our minds to-day. Your President has asked me to give you the instance of a talk which was given to another gathering, last year. I apologise to those who may have heard my last talk. If I may appear to repeat myself.

When I had the privilege of discussing with you the problem of disarmament the thesis was to maintain that under modern conditions, the unfaithful forces of Science harnessed to the ingenuity of man, would make it impossible to limit armaments effectively.

Of course the world would rejoice if the race of armaments could be stopped, but nothing is more dangerous than to have an agreed disarmament convention only to find that the signatories every day are upstaging by new inventions, new political alignments and new military alliances.

It is more natural to argue that if war is outlawed effectively then the weapons of war will disappear, than to argue that if the weapons of war disappear then war will have been effectively outlawed.

If the Temple of Peace cannot be reached by the road of disarmament, by what other path can the Pilgrim of Peace reach his Temple?

That is the question which we shall try to answer.

MIGHT AND RIGHT

Before doing that it is necessary to discuss two other questions which are intimately concerned with the main problem:

(1) The Principle of the King's Peace

(2) The Problem of the conscientious objector.

When Henry II came to the throne of England in the 12th Century, England was torn by incessant warfare between the Barons. These powerful Barons had their private armies and whenever one baron had or felt he had a grievance against another he would take the law into his own hands and like some nations of to-day wage a war of retaliation. The result was that England's green and pleasant land was continually devastated. Because two private and powerful citizens had a quarrel the whole country had to suffer in order that one or the other (usually the more powerful) might secure redress.

When the King intervened in the name of the nation both the belligerents pleaded the merits of their case. As Hegel said several centuries later, "In every quarrel the issues are not between right and wrong, but it is a question of might against right."

Henry II saw the dilemma. He realized at once that the plea of the merits of the case was the bete noire of national peace. He hit on a superb antidote. He pronounced the idea of the King's Peace. He said somewhat like this—of course, in the elegant language of a royal proclamation. "The whole of England is now placed under my peace. If any one of my subjects be he Lord or serf breaks my peace, I shall treat it as a contempt of the King's majesty. If my subjects in future have a quarrel they must settle it peacefully or not at all. I shall in future completely ignore the merits of the case as a justification for a breach of my peace."

I and my officers of the peace (and shall I call them my justices of the peace) shall punish without exception every breach of the King's Peace by whosoever caused."

THE KELLOGG PACT

From that moment international war gradually ceased. The English nation had introduced law as a substitute for war in the solution of disputes. With the advent of the King's Peace we see the rise of the King's court.

Now the Kellogg Pact sets out to do for international life what the King's Peace succeeded in doing for national life. It is significant that the first letters of the King's Peace are also the first letters of the Kellogg Pact.

Contrast this conception of political existence with the international anarchy of to-day. To-day when a war or a threat of war breaks out between two states, we at once fall into the blinding error of considering the merits of the case.

PEACEFUL SETTLEMENTS

If A and B citizens of Hong Kong were found fighting in Queen's Road, the policeman there could not sit in judgment on the merits of their case, otherwise there would be confusion ten times worse confounded. Further he would be usurping the function of the judge. No—his concern is to enforce peace (that is to use social force to preserve peace). The policeman's concern is to see that no private squabble should be allowed to prevent other peaceful citizens from the full enjoyment of the Peace.

If you see what I am driving at—you will at once see the relevance of such a trend of reasoning in international disputes.

In 1932, at the height of the Manchurian crisis, too much discussion of the merits of one case prejudiced a balanced view of that dispute. The repeat danger in the Italo Ethiopian impasse is that we should make the same mistake. I risk an exaggeration and say that the merits of the case have nothing whatever to do with the problem of enforcing world peace. If the people remain faithful to this crotchet drawn from the conception of the King's Peace we shall soon be freeing the world of all wars.

Nations must be made to settle their international disputes by peaceful means or not at all.

The fact that a dispute exists between two states is no argument that it should be settled at once so that if peaceful means fail, then war must be resorted to. The dispute may be allowed to await a solution later on. For over a decade England and Egypt have disagreed over the Sudan. They cannot solve their dispute but they have not gone to war about it. In a calmer atmosphere, with time and reason, all disputes are capable of peaceful solution.

We must not hurriedly pass on to a consideration of the problem of the conscientious objector.

There is a large group of very fine men and women who are so anxious to usher in the reign of peace that they propose to do so by maintaining that under no circumstances would they fight for King and country.

PACIFISTS

I have so many pacifist friends that I am extremely reluctant to say anything that will cause them pain. But the pacifist has so wittingly surrendered the cause of peace to the Chauvinist that I feel a word in reason is necessary.

The pacifist position of declining to fight under all circumstances is based on the submission that all resort to physical force is wrong. When attacked we will not retaliate and when asked to attack or defend we will firmly decline.

Such a philosophy is more suitable in a monastery than in human society, where if good men withdraw their influence, unscrupulous men will prevail.

Here let us once again return to first principles—this time, we will go to Burke. In Burke's day there was a heated controversy whether good men should support party Government or withdraw from it altogether. Many conscientious statesmen who had the good of the country at heart felt that the party machinery had been persistently completed by selfish men and faction that they would have nothing to do with it. Then Burke thundered out in his "Present Discontents."

"This withdrawal," he said, "is tantamount to surrender. What is wrong is not a dead instrument called Party Machine. What is wrong is the misuse or abuse of a good thing. If good men will not organise for the public good, bad men will combine for anti-social ends. We must reason with the pacifist. Their ultimate object is the good life of Society but the method they adopt to obtain that end is suicidal. It is a policy which unscrupulous men desire to be lost. The existence of anti-social forces in the body politic is no reason for the withdrawal of the social forces. It is the very reason for the social forces to be better organised and to be in the very centre of the body politic, to keep it in political health and sanity."

ANTI-SOCIAL FORCES

The anti-social forces are today much better organised than the social forces. There is nothing not even the door so efficiently organised as the arms traffic, so persuasive as the traffic in drugs and women.

Further force is a neutral element. It is, in itself, neither good nor bad. It is the use to what it is put which gives it quality or lack of quality.

We fail to find a criterion when resort to force is social and is justified and when resort to force is anti-social and not justified.

Let us go back to first principles of law again.

Take the case of a policeman and the criminal.

Both resort to force to gain their ends. In the case of the criminal the resort to force is arbitrary, it originates from himself (or to use the phraseology of the law court he takes the law into his own hands). He uses his force for his own benefit. That resort to force is anti-social.

The policeman also resorts to force. It does originate with him, for he is in a sense, a disinterested party and the resort to force is not for his own ends but for the good of society of which he is a part.

Apply this criterion to international disputes and you can always tell whether the resort to force in any state is justified or not.

A UNITED FRONT

If all the Pacifists of the world were to say that they will under no circumstances fight for their country if the resort to force in that particular is anti-social but that it will join forces with the social force of the world in order to stamp out any attempt or breach of world peace—then we are on the first step towards a war-purged world. At the last Lambeth Conference the Archbishop and Bishops in convocation resolved that they will not fight in any international war if their State did not first submit that dispute to arbitration. Any resort to settle an international dispute by taking the law into one's own hands is anti-social and all the people of the world as guardians and justices of the peace, should at once organise themselves into one vast force and present a united front against the breaker of the peace.

Time does not permit us to discuss the means of the disposal of a world force organised, united and determined to throw the whole of its weight against the two international belligerents. If they plead the merits of the case, we should at once return that the merit of the case has nothing to do with the fact of the breach

AGED COOLIE KILLED

Landslide At North Point

A small landslide which was unfortunately marred by a tragic sequel occurred yesterday morning shortly after 10.30 o'clock when a coolie was crushed to death and another removed to hospital in a serious condition suffering from multiple injuries.

While a gang of coolies were at work at the P.W.D. Stone Quarry at North Point, a little distance behind the Chinese Bathing Club Shed, a mass of rock and earth suddenly slid down from a height of about 80 feet.

Most of the coolies quickly scampered for shelter but Wong Chai, aged 53, and Hop Fat, aged 37, who were working at the base of the hill were caught by the falling debris and were covered by about a ton of rocks and earth.

The coolies on the spot immediately went to the rescue of their comrades and the Fire Brigade was immediately informed of the accident. Two appliances were at once despatched to the scene one from Wanchai and one from Central under Officer J. W. Woodard.

The firemen worked feverishly for about ten minutes when the lifeless body of Wong Chai was extricated from the debris in a mangled condition. Hop Fat was rescued a little later with multiple injuries and was at once removed to the hospital in an ambulance.

That particular part of the hill is composed of solid rocks with little earth around it and it is surmised that the rocks were loosened by the recent heavy rains and gave way under pressure of the water which had collected on the top.

of peace—which after all is a worthy concern. The merits of judges and arbitrators.

We are in the throes of a world economic depression now 6 years old. The cause of it is strictly speaking not economic but political. The remedy for it again is not economic but political. I well remember sitting by the French bank of the Rhine looking over to Germany on that fateful week in September 1931, when Mukden was occupied.

OWN RESOURCES

Imagine Latvia growing its own rubber and you will realise how every State is trying to raise all the armaments of war—cotton, rubber, gutta percha, oil, petrol—within their own territories. They know that it is economically unsound, but they can ill afford to be without war supplies in a world in which war is still possible. So the international river of trade has been slowly dammed at every part of its course until now only a few drops of water trickle down. There will and can be no return of world prosperity until the problem of war and peace is settled.

Thus I leave this very inadequate and sketchy discussion with a big question mark.

THE PRICE OF PEACE

Are we perhaps to pay the price of peace—in other words, use social force if necessary to make certain for all times that those who break the world peace will of a certainty have the majority of mankind against them?

The basis of peace is there. I do not think collective system is gone. What is lacking is the will to back it up. Men working for selfish and anti-social ends have the will to organise themselves for those ends. Have we the will to do likewise? If you desire prosperity, if you wish for the full enjoyment of the fat years of 1924 and 1928 again, then have the will and determination to seek first the kingdom of peace and all these things will be added unto you.

THANKS RETURNED

In proposing a vote of thanks to the speaker Rotarian M. K. Lo said that the subject of the talk should be in the hearts of all Rotarians since that was one of the ideals of the Rotary Club. After Rotarian Lo had made reference to the "conscientious objector" and the ways and means to every taking part in war he concluded by saying that the question of International Peace had filled the hearts of most people especially in Hong Kong and one who personifies the ideal of International Peace goodwill and friendliness was none other than the speaker of the day Mr. George She.

THE SANITARY BOARD

Two Applications Rejected

Of the three applications that came up before the Sanitary Board yesterday at its fortnightly meeting two were refused while the third was deferred till the next meeting.

An application for an offensive trade licence namely cleansing sharks' fins at No. 19 Des Voeux Road West, third floor was refused.

An application for an eating house licence at No. 352 Shanghai Street ground floor was deferred to the next meeting due to a similar licence having been granted in another case about a fortnight ago. The Board would like to go into the present application in the meantime.

Another refusal was made in the application for an eating house licence at No. 84 Des Voeux Road Central, ground floor.

The other business was of a routine nature.

Those present were Mr. W. J. Carrie, president, Dr. G. W. Pope, M.O.H., Messrs. M. K. Lo, L. C. F. Bellamy and Dr. R. A. de Castro Basto.

CAPITAL TO BE REDUCED

I.C.I. Scheme Before The Court

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 2.

A petition by the Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., for confirmation of a proposed reduction of its capital from £25,000,000 to £23,565,859 came before Mr. Justice Eve in the Chancery Division to-day on an application to fix a date for the hearing.

The petition is opposed by over 85,000 shareholders.

Mr. Lionel Cohen, K.C., for the company, asked that, in addition to fixing a day for the hearing, his Lordship should also fix a time for the delivery of the evidence in opposition.

THE OPPOSITION

Mr. Justice Eve said he understood that the opposition fell into two categories—irregularities at the meetings and that it was an unfair scheme.

Mr. H. J. Wallington, K.C., for the opponents, said there were one or two other matters, and his clients, rightly or wrongly, submitted that it was a case of such an unusual character that the Court should order "discovery."

This scheme, as they now knew, had been under the consideration of the Board since January, 1933. During that time the persons who bought shares knew nothing about it but bought under the old conditions.

TWO IMPORTANT QUESTIONS

"At some time," said Mr. Wallington, "a large number of these deferred shares have been bought from directors, or past directors, and there are two very serious questions for the Court to consider—"

"Whether in all the circumstances the shareholders were fully informed by the circular sent out by the directors; and whether they were in part misled at the meeting when the polls were taken."

"There is not the slightest idea in anyone's mind," counsel added, "that there has been any want of good faith at all, but I want to convey in language incapable of being misunderstood that this is a claim in which the petitioners are saying:—"

"We do not suggest that the capital has been lost or is unrepresented by available assets or that there is any question of insolvency; what we must be careful about is to have reserves for depreciation and obsolescence and it would be very convenient for the directors to have a capital sum to draw upon instead of drawing upon revenue."

DIRECTORS' HOLDINGS

With reference to the holdings of the directors, Mr. Cohen declared that no director had either bought or sold a single deferred share since the scheme was formulated.

Mr. Justice Eve said that the matter would stand over until the next meeting when he would fix a date for the hearing.

HONG KONG, JULY 17, 1935.

THE SCOURGE OF OPIUM

It has become commonplace to see in the news that at Nanking or Peking, or elsewhere, several human beings have been executed for breaking the new rules about opium and narcotics. In the majority of the cases, the victims are registered addicts, who after official treatment, were discharged as cured, but were afterwards caught indulging again, a lapse for which the penalty is death. Glancing at the statistics, we find that hundreds, during the last few months, have lost their lives in this manner and included among them are police and other officials, and also women. The new law absolutely forbids cultivation, transportation and consumption of opium, except in cases where it is used as medicine, and it also forbids the use of narcotics for breaches of which there are appropriate penalties. This is the law applied in the Chinese Courts in the foreign concessions, but across the boundaries separating them from Chinese territory the new rules are in operation, and where in the one place the offender may be fined or get a spell in jail, in the adjacent Courts, a similar offender is consigned to eternity by a squad of riflemen... barbarous punishment with the humanitarian object of discouraging a soul-destroying habit.

It has long since been generally acknowledged that the taste for opium and its derivatives is a heavy handicap on China. In several of the Western Provinces where poppy is widely grown and cheap to buy, many millions habitually take the drug. A considerable proportion are slaves to it and the result is a large number of physical wrecks. In the interior the transport of merchandise and the carrying of travellers in chairs require enormous number of coolies who march between 20 and 35 miles daily, competition compelling them to exert themselves to the limit. At every halt the coolies have a few puffs at opium, and it is amazing to see how a party of men, dropping from exhaustion, can, after resort to this wonderful drug, resume the journey vigorously and cheerfully. They become old men long before their time and their womenfolk, with miserable homes and insufficient sustenance, look to the opium for solace and give it to their children to keep them quiet. Opium is a blessed remedy for those in pain and only those who have been relieved by it can know how supremely efficacious it can be. To become dependent on it, however, is to lose control of body and soul.

Some twenty years ago when the opium agitation was at its height in China, the Government policy of suppressing cultivation came near complete success. The British Government had agreed that the Indian import traffic should be reduced step by step and ended in 10 years, "pari passu" with China's estimated reduction of cultivation within the same period. Soon after the signature of the agreement, Great Britain, recognising the great progress, made by China, washed her hands of the traffic altogether by decreeing its abolition eight years before the date agreed upon. Young China—that infinitesimal proportion who had imbibed foreign education—was frantic with delight, and to all appearances opium for China was a discarded habit never to be resumed. Unhappily for the country, one of the evils following the Revolution was the growth of militarism, a condition arising from the disappearance of the Manchu administrative system, and its supersession by the military governors in the provinces.

Their wars and the state of military rivalry which succeeded them called for a great deal of money and this was indeed difficult to obtain from an impoverished population by ordinary taxation. The policy of promoting the cultivation of opium soon became almost universal as great profit was derived from taxing cultivation and the finished product in transit to the wealthy cities of the coast. After the signature of the Agreement opium had become scarce and expensive, but the taste for opium had remained, and in recent years

A CROP OF MISHAPS

Several Sent To Hospital

A number of accidents were reported to the Police yesterday which necessitated the removal of the victims to hospital.

The car skidded and mounted the pavement outside No. 29A Wyndham Street, smashing the doors and windows of the house, used as a store house and untenanted at the time.

TWO INJURED

Yuen Ngau Neu a seven-year-old girl was admitted to the Kwong Wah Hospital suffering from head injuries said to have been inflicted when knocked down by a motor car.

In his report to the police Pang Nau a 29-year-old licensed driver of Fanling stated that whilst driving private car No. 3274 along Canton Road yesterday morning the little girl suddenly darted across the road. The driver swerved to avoid hitting the girl but she was struck down by the mud guard and received injuries to her head.

In another accident a coolie named Chan Kai Chai aged 36 was also removed to hospital yesterday evening.

In this instance the man ran across the road in front of private car No. 479 driven by Wong Kwai at the time.

WHARF ACCIDENT

Whilst unloading cargo from the steamer Gremer alongside the Hong Kong and Kowloon Wharf and Godowns yesterday Lo Kam a 28-year-old coolie was removed to hospital with head injuries said to have been inflicted by a sling of cargo which was at the time being unloaded on to the wharf.

production and consumption have been as great as ever. In effect the main source of revenue of some of the Provinces has for a long time been opium, and it is an outstanding fact that the regional independence so frequently manifested in the civil warfare of recent times was rendered possible owing to the existence of revenue derived from opium. The Nanking Government, from its inception, has been the declared enemy of opium; yet the official suppression bureau established by the Government have been used as agencies for collecting taxation on opium and for promoting the traffic in it.

ENGLAND UNLUCKY IN THIRD TEST

South Africans Force A Draw

There were several interruptions on the last day of the Third Test Match at Leeds owing to rain in the early afternoon and bad light just before tea-time. It was a great pity conditions aggravated the play as every minute was valuable in gaining a definite decision for either side.

England declared at 7 wickets for 284 runs, and with a lead of 45 runs in the first innings, they set South Africa the task of making 340 runs to win. W. Hammond scored 87 runs and was the most useful man just when England needed runs as quickly as possible. Mitchell contributed 72, Smith 37, Wyatt 44 and each assisted in getting England out of the rut.

Bell was the most successful bowler for South Africa taking three wickets for 38 runs. His victims including England's skipper who was taken at the slips and Hardstaff and Ames whom he clean bowled. Vincent was far too expensive although he took four wickets at an average of 26 runs a piece, Langton who was one of the bowling heroes of the previous match, failed to come off. He gave away 55 runs without taking any wicket.

The match ended in a draw, South Africa losing 5 wickets for 194 at the close of play.

London, July 16.

With a lead of 45 runs on the first innings, and the overnight score of 177 for three wickets in their second effort, R. E. S. Wyatt (15 not out) and W. E. Hammond (14 not out) resumed their places at the wicket on the final day of the Third Test, at Leeds determined to enhance the advantage gained by England over South Africa.

Early weather indications at Headingley were dull and threatening, but an improvement set in later with the wicket still holding good. A crowd of six thousand attended the resumption of play.

England's captain and his partner were full of confidence when they resumed their innings for the rapid dismissal of the visiting batsmen well under the rather poor score put up by England, they were buoyed up, with hope and were out to make runs at every opportunity. The South African bowlers, Vincent and Bell, however, pegged down the batsmen to only a single from the first four overs and then Hammond showed a bout of aggressiveness by driving three deliveries from Vincent's over to the boundary and sending up 200 on the board after a total of three hours play. At this time Hammond had scored 39 and Wyatt 17 with the total standing at 204 for 3.

Hammond was very bold in driving to cover point despite changes in the bowling. Crisp yielded 24 runs in three overs. Hammond reached his 52 runs in a little over an hour and the Gloucestershire batsman raised a round of applause as he lifted Langton over the ropes straight over the wicket to send up 250 on the board after nearly two and a half hours batting.

WYATT CAUGHT

At 277 for 3 when the pair had added a hundred runs in one hour's batting during the morning, rain stopped play for 25 minutes. Disaster followed soon after the resumption as Wyatt was neatly held by Vincent at second slip off Bell. Wyatt had scored 44 and the total was 277 for 4.

Hardstaff of Nottingham, joined Hammond, but his life was a short one as he played late and was beaten by the very next ball sent down by Bell, the score being unaltered, 277 for 5.

ENGLAND DECLARES

Ames came in next and after he had gathered 13 runs he was beaten by an in-swinging ball from Bell, 291 for 6. Nichols joined Hammond, but the newcomers were despatched by Vincent after he had scored two runs, 294 for 7.

Hammond was undefeated with 87 when it was decided to declare the innings closed at this stage.

Hammond batted for an hour and three quarters. His unfinished score of 87 included a sixer and fourteen boundaries. It was a splendid innings when runs were wanted quickly.

SOUTH AFRICA BATS

Set with 340 runs to make if they are to win, South Africa then had the lease of the crease and at lunch time had obtained 33 runs without loss. Siedle claiming 10 and Mitchell 22 of the runs.

A crowd estimated at 10,000 was present after lunch when Siedle and Mitchell resumed their batting.

Bowes and Nichols had spells at the ball. The former was bowling rather erratic and the 50 mark was set up by the two batsmen after 45 minutes play. Siedle was out to a brilliant left-handed catch by Hammond at second slip off Bowes after he had scored 21 runs with the score standing at 53 runs for 1 wicket.

This incidentally brought Bowes to his 100th wicket of the season.

ROWAN BOWLED

Rowan who joined Mitchell was cleaned bowled by Bowes after he had obtained five runs the score at this stage being 61 runs for 2 wickets with Mitchell claiming 32. Viljoen who came in next did not need the prompting of his expert partner to play safe. Wyatt kept ringing bowling changes and always changed Bowes field when Viljoen had the batting. Mitchell scored by well-placed strokes both in front and behind the wicket and had 47 to his credit when he lost Viljoen who was bowled by Sims after having scored 9, 3 for 91.

BAD LIGHT

Scoring had become very slow at this stage, Mitchell scoring four runs, 20 minutes while Viljoen scored 7 in 45 minutes. The latter thereafter failed to score in the next quarter of an hour. He was ironically cheered when he pulled a short pitched ball from Sims for two. The stubborn stand ended after another two overs when Viljoen was beaten by a legbreak which came up well off the pitch. The third wicket partnership realised 30 runs in a little over an hour, Mitchell had now scored 57 runs and Wade four and with the total at 108 for 3 play was stopped owing to bad light.

MITCHELL OUT

Tea was taken during the stoppage. Sims and Hammond were

YELLOW RIVER OVER BOTH BANKS

Alarming Reports From Changyuan

Nanking, July 16. Reports from Hsuihow state that the Yellow River is threatening to force a breach in the main dyke at Yangfeng, East Honan.

If this should happen the flood-water will very likely sweep down the river's former course, and into North Kiangsu. Should this happen it will inevitably entail enormous loss of life and property.

Precautions are being taken in Northern Kiangsu where local officials have been instructed to strengthen and if necessary rebuild the dykes along the old river-bed. Only by this means can they hope to control the flood in any way.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Peiping, July 16. A message from Paoingfu says that the Yellow River has overflowed both banks near Changyuan, the southernmost tip of Hopei, flooding an area where there are 320 villages. Scores of houses have collapsed and hundreds are believed to have been drowned. There are 120,000 homeless. Much livestock has perished. The flood water is about six feet deep.

The Changyuan magistrate describes terrible suffering among the population. The Provincial Government is providing funds for emergency relief.

HANKOW FEARS

Hankow, July 16. The water level receded slightly this morning, but optimism is premature in view of doubts of the ability of the Changkung dyke to withstand the pressure of the water.

A part of the bund opposite the Russian Concession is inundated as a result of the water penetrating the sluice, but repairs were soon effected.

Flood prevention expenses in Hankow so far amount to $370,000.

OFFICER SHOT

An officer of the Garrison Headquarters was shot this morning on account of negligence in connection with the measures against the floods.

The Public Safety Bureau reports that the death roll in Hankow is 23 only.

The reason for the shooting of the officer this morning was for slackness in dyke protection.

PLANE FIRED ON

General Chang Hsueh Liang in an interview with Reuters stated that while dropping 1,400 pounds of rice on a starving village in Hupei, Szechuen, this morning, his private plane was fired upon by bandits, bullets entering the wing.

Government bombing planes are also dropping food in the affected areas.

YANGTZE FLOODS

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).] Nanking, July 10. The Yangtze River registered high watermarks in the last few days. What might be termed the ordinary spring rise, caused by the melting of the snows in Tibet and Szechuan, is now practically over, and it is the rainfall, which is seasonal just now, which will determine the flood situation in the Yangtze.

The Yangtze River is the main arterial waterway of the country, being invaluable for irrigation as well as for navigation. It is unlike the Yellow River, which constantly carries large quantities of silt and is a constant danger to the nation. However, during the past few years the Yangtze has also been threatening the livelihood of the people and causing untold misery in the country.

The solution lies naturally in constructive conservancy work. With this in view, the National Government has organized a Yangtze River Conservancy Commission. However, owing to the unrest in the country and to lack of funds, the Commission has not been able to develop its work to the fullest extent.

DROP IN LEVEL

The most welcome news at present is that on the upper reaches of the Yangtze, between Ichang and Chungking, there has been a drop in the level of the river since Monday, and that the rise at Honkew has been comparatively slight. The situation in the past two days has undoubtedly taken a turn for the better, and it is to be hoped that later news will record further improvement.

But for the fact that the city of Hankow is protected by a flood wall along the Bund, all the streets would already have been under water. The populace has already taken the further precaution of moving their valuables and goods from ground-floor level as only a further slight rise would be sufficient to flood the city. Not only the authorities of the three Wuhan cities but other official bodies, especially the National Economic Council, are working prodigiously to strengthen the dykes and to ward off the danger as best they can, and it is reported that many thousands of labourers are engaged at different vulnerable spots along the river to keep the swirling flood waters confined to the main channel.

The problem of river conservancy is so enormous that it is little less than staggering, and the only thing to do with available resources is to see dykes are kept in good repair and raised as high as practicable. Now, the National Economic Council has taken over the work of the old Conservancy Commissions. In the present emergency the Council is voting quite large sums of money to the immediate work of flood prevention and in demonstrating that it fully realizes the seriousness of the situation.

KING REVIEWS THE NAVY

Occasion Marred By Accident

London, July 16.

One hundred and sixty warships thundered a salute as His Majesty the King aboard the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert left Portsmouth to review the greatest naval assemblage since the Coronation.

Immense crowds hours before the review thronged every vantage point from Southsea to Portsmouth. Many thousands, favoured by a very warm night, slept on beaches, cliffs and esplanades.

The ships were polished to perfection and were moored in lines extending ten miles.

A regrettable incident marred the occasion as an aeroplane chartered at Heston to take passengers to the review crashed while taking off and burst into flames. Two passengers were incinerated, while four others and the pilot were sent to hospital in an unconscious condition.

JEWS ATTACKED IN BERLIN

Many Cafes Wrecked During Riots

Berlin, July 16.

A number of cafes from which it is supposed Jews were hauled out were wrecked during the riots last night arising from Nazi reprisals against Jewish resentment over a new anti-Semitic film.

Apart from several Jews taken into protective custody, so far there have been no arrests. An official report of the affair was issued by a German agency in the form of a communiqué headed "Against Jewish Arrogance." After referring to the demonstration outside a cinema, the communiqué adds that a great crowd gave expression of its distaste at the provocative behaviour of the Jewish theatre girls.

At neighbouring cafes where the guests were mostly Jews the public protested against the increasingly audacious behaviour of Jews. The appearance of their indignant comrades sufficed in most cases to cause the Jewish visitors to leave the cafes hurriedly.

Apart from minor incidents which occurred before the police arrived, the latter prevented further collisions.

Asked if the information recently published by the German Government regarding the ships they had laid down or intended to lay down this year was accepted by the British Government as in accordance with the Anglo-German Agreement, Sir Victor Warrender replied for the Admiralty that, as would be seen by reference to the exchange of notes, the programme formed no part of the agreement, but it was in no way contrary to any part of it.

WILL LAVAL'S CABINET SURVIVE?

Rigorous Programme Of Retrenchment

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press")

(By Telegraph Copyright. Telegraphic Messages: Ordinance, 1891. Received, July 16, 7.30 p.m.)

Paris, July 16.

M. Laval's rigorous retrenchment programme whose purpose is to restore the budget equilibrium, reinvigorate the economic depression, prevent unjustifiable rises in price levels, and keep the currency stable, was discussed in all its phases in the Cabinet session on Monday.

To determine the final wording of the 23 emergency decrees embodying the whole of the financial reform, the three Cabinet meetings under the chairmanship of the President of the French Republic were convened for Tuesday, the text to be published in the French Government Gazette on Wednesday or at the latest on Thursday.

Although something definite is known of M. Laval's plans, it is clear from his various utterances that all the subventions now being paid for the encouragement of the aircraft building industry, shipping and various industries; also all pensions, grants annuities, salaries and wages will undergo reductions as well, probably by as much as ten per cent.

From the fierce opposition these proposed economies have provoked till now from the Parliament and the public, it is evident that the Cabinet will have a desperate battle to fight to carry out the reforms.

France is now asking whether the Cabinet will survive the crisis as no single party is wholeheartedly behind the retrenchment programme.

M. Laval intends taking the bull by the horns by speaking to the whole nation over the wireless, immediately the new decrees are published, explaining the absolute necessity of these measures in the interests of the whole of France and pointing out that sacrifices have been apportioned as fairly as possible to all sections of the people.

The Premier will ask for the support of the whole nation, on this matter so that he may be able to face the foreign political tasks including that of the maintenance of European peace with the knowledge that he has the undivided confidence of the French nation behind him.

LORDS AND THE NAVY

Anglo-German Naval Agreement

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29.

The debate on the naval and military situation which Lord Lloyd opened in the House of Lords turned mainly upon the Anglo-German Naval Agreement, on which there was diversity of opinion.

Lord Lloyd was doubtful about some features of the Agreement and critical of the methods of the Government in concluding it without consulting France and Italy. Such action, he held, was bound to be painful to our old allies. While he did not say that we should make no agreement with Germany or that the Treaty of Versailles ought not to be revised, he charged the Government with inconsistency in their policy. They had not only recognized and condoned but had given every appearance of abetting the unilateral denunciation of a treaty. It was a new moral standpoint for Great Britain to condone the action of a treaty-breaking nation because we could not resist that nation by force.

NEW RATIO DEPOSED

As to the contents of the Agreement, he did not share the alarm created in some quarters by the submarine clause, but he deplored the new ratio in cruisers and destroyers to which Great Britain was now being committed just when we were looking forward to release from the fetters imposed by the London Naval Treaty.

Lord Biraborgi, from the Labour benches, supported the view that the Anglo-German Naval Agreement was bad business for Great Britain. What, he asked, should we have said if France had made a separate naval agreement with Germany or the United States of America with Japan? The Agreement was bad, also, because it cut across "all-round" limitation of naval armaments.

Lord Latham defended the Agreement as the first concrete achievement in limitation of arms. There was nothing in it, he declared, to prevent further reduction of tonnage and it improved the prospects of the Disarmament Conference. His only criticism was that the standard of comparison ought to have been between the British and German Naval forces and not between those of Germany and of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

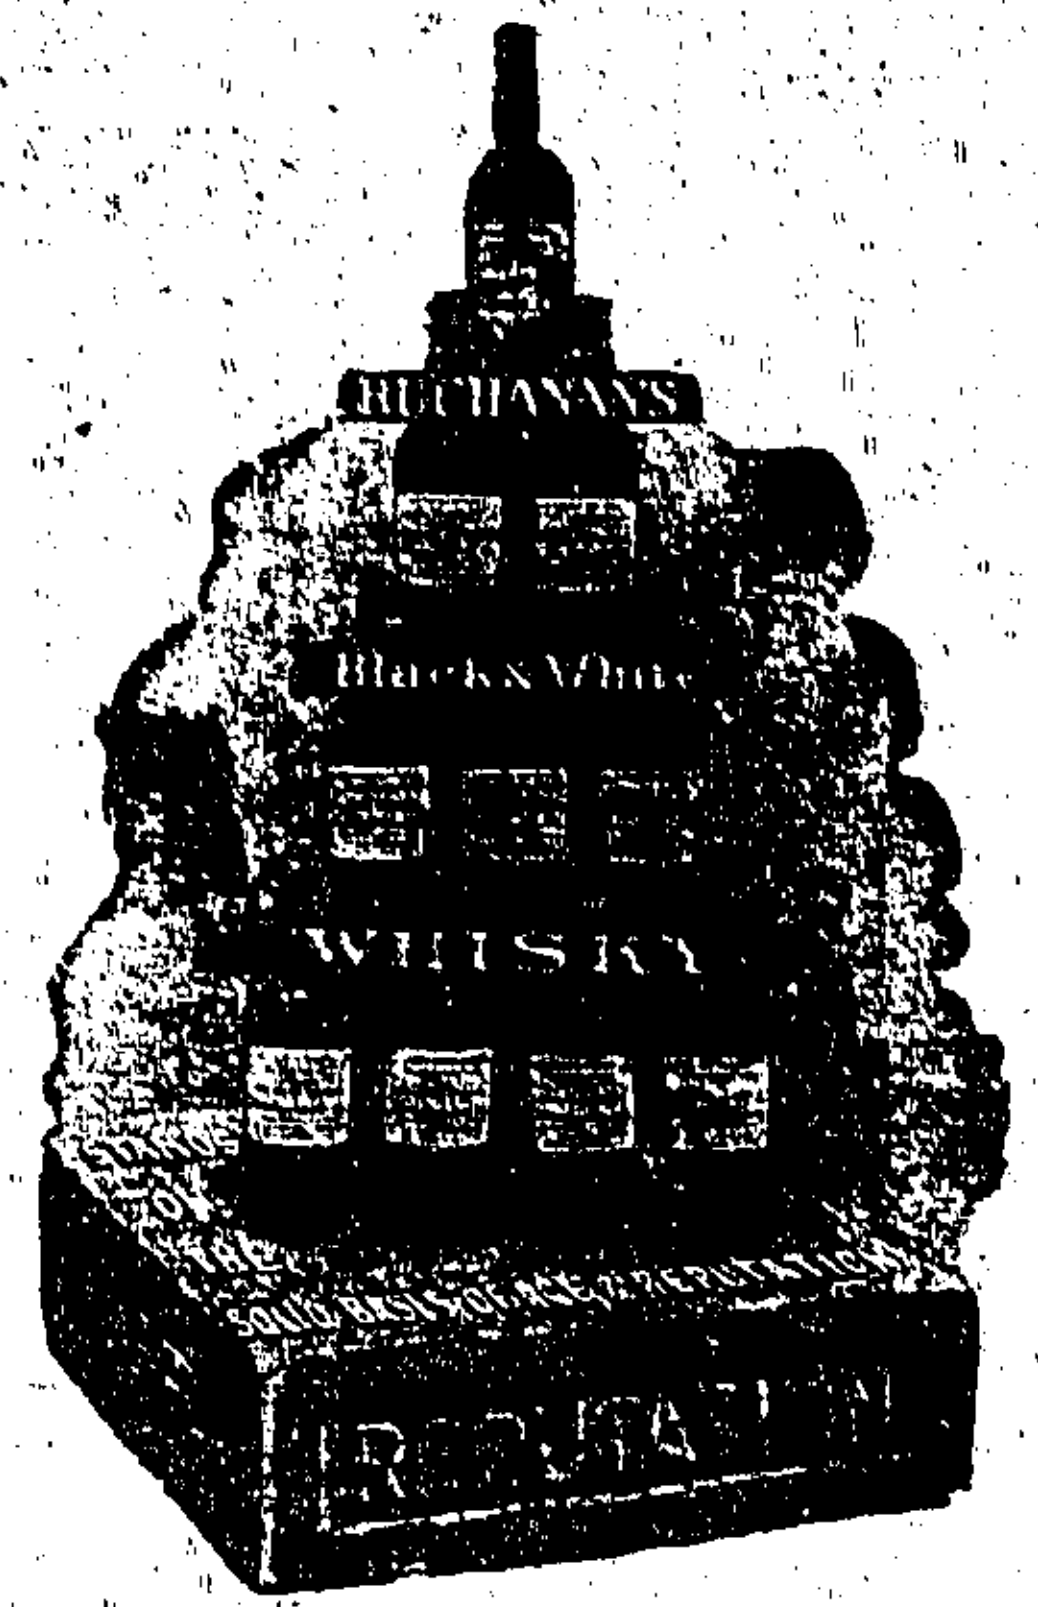

LORD BEATTY'S SUPPORT

Lord Beatty declared that our naval forces were inadequate and deplored the fetters imposed by the London Naval Treaty. He urged the Government to avail themselves of the "escalator clause" and to see that future efforts in naval agreement should be directed to limitation of the size of ships and guns. But he welcomed the Anglo-German agreement, for which we owed a debt of gratitude. Germany had accepted for herself 35 per cent. of the naval strength of the British Commonwealth of Nations; if she had claimed 50 per cent. we could not have stopped her; and by that gesture the possibility of Anglo-German rivalry at sea was ended. Parity in submarines was not the same thing as parity in other categories. Submarines could not counter submarines, and Germany's acceptance of Part IV of the London Treaty made ruthless submarine war in the future unlikely.

The attitude of the Labour Opposition was defined by Lord Ponsonby. They did not condemn the agreement with Germany, but they did condemn the methods by which it was concluded. It was in essence a rearmament agreement. If other Powers increased their navies and we and Germany did the same the consequence would be a new race in armaments.

FRANCE CONSULTED

Lord Londonderry replied that the Government adhered to the declaration in the London communiqué of February 2, that no Power whose armaments had been defined by the Peace Treaty was entitled by unilateral action to modify its obligations. But Germany was increasing her naval strength beyond the limits imposed by the Treaty, and the Government believed that the best method of achieving "general settlement" was to endeavour to reach agreement with Germany. To have missed the opportunity presented by Germany's naval offer would have been to miss the chance of eliminating the fatal Anglo-German competition which poisoned the atmosphere a quarter of a century ago. It would be a great mistake to assume that the Agreement prejudiced other naval Powers.

YEOMEN OF THE GUARD

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 2.

The Duke of Connaught gave a personal message from the King to the Yeomen of his bodyguard when the Duke inspected the Yeomen in the gardens of St. James's Palace, London, yesterday. It was the 450th anniversary of the forming of the corps, the oldest fighting force in the world.

"I have a message from His Majesty the King," the Duke of Connaught said to the Yeomen, who were drawn up in a picturesque double line on the green lawns of the Palace. "The King greatly regrets that he is not able to be able to be here in person, and has asked me to convey to you an expression of his gratitude and approval of your service."

The Duke added that there was no force, he should think, in the world with such a splendid record and history as the Yeomen. He took it as a great honour that the King had asked him to represent him on that occasion.

The Yeomen, in their Tudor uniforms of scarlet and gold and black velvet caps and gold tasselled halberds, were inspected by the Duke, who walked round their ranks in the bright sunshine with Lord Templemore, their captain. Afterwards the Yeomen marched past the Duke in columns of four.

WAR UPON THE GOVERNMENT

Lloyd George And "New Deal"

London, July 15.

Parliamentary opinion veered towards a generalisation of activities for next spring thanks to the clarification of the atmosphere by the Government's rejection of Mr. Lloyd George's £250,000,000 "New Deal" proposals to-night.

As a reply to Mr. Lloyd George's action in publishing the outline of his scheme to-day, the Government is preparing a reasoned statement which, it is understood, will flatly reject suggestions like the nationalisation of the coal, cotton, iron and steel industries,

NEUSEL AGAIN BEATS JACK PETERSEN

Towel Thrown in After Ten Rounds

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29. Jack Petersen, the British heavy-weight champion, fought the greatest battle of his career at Wembley Stadium last night, when, to the bitter disappointment of 60,000 people, he was forced to surrender to Walter Neusel, of Germany, at the end of the tenth round.

The crowd was the largest ever to attend a fight in this country; yet heavy rain during the afternoon and evening, probably cost the promoter £10,000.

Another deluge fell for half an hour before the fight started. There were about 4,000 spectators in the expensive seats at the ring side, all without shelter.

Hundreds of men and women in evening dress and without hats or raincoats were drenched to the skin. Many women went home; but many more stayed to watch one of the most thrilling and dramatic fights ever seen in this country.

£30,000 IN FOUR YEARS

To Petersen this fight meant his whole future in the ring. He had to avenge a defeat by Neusel last February if he were to have the slightest chance of a fight for the world's title. He was beaten, and so he faded out internationally. However, he has probably made more than £30,000 from a career extending over four years, and although he will be only 24 next September, it will not surprise boxing people if his marriage in the autumn is followed by retirement from the ring.

If it should happen that Petersen never fights again, last night's contest will always remain in the memory of those who saw it as one of the fiercest ever witnessed.

At the end of the tenth round Petersen tottered to his corner, fell into the ropes by his stool and shook his head. That headshake told his father that he could go on no longer, and Mr. Petersen needed to be told nothing more.

He threw in the towel. It was the wisest thing he has ever done. The gallant Welshman was finished.

Petersen had fought a losing battle for eight rounds and he had fought the last three mechanically—dazed and shattered by punishment, almost blinded in both eyes, muttering at times and even laughing in his agony.

WITHIN A PUNCH OF VICTORY

The tragedy of it was that more than once he seemed within a single punch of victory, for this fight turned from one opponent to the other in amazing fashion.

For ten rounds the Welshman had been slashing at Neusel. It was like hitting a railway engine. Nothing stopped Neusel from moving on, and even during those moments when he was all but done, and when his collapse seemed imminent, no punch that Petersen could deliver caused him to step back an inch.

The second round was the vital one. Neusel had shown shrewd tactics at the beginning, for, knowing that Petersen would go for a quick knock-out, he himself came from his corner at the first bell and took the offensive.

He crowded into the smaller man—Neusel was some 18lb heavier—and never allowed him to get himself for a punch. Petersen kept wonderfully cool, in fact, he has never boxed with such care as he did last night, and in the second round he saw his chance and flung all he had into the battle.

He landed a dozen heavy blows—left hooks and right swings to the jaw. Neusel began to falter and to fall into his opponent's hands, and the crowd, scenting victory, in two minutes of this round Petersen staked his biggest effort and it must have been heartbreaking for him when Neusel weathered the storm.

PETERSEN'S EYEBROW CUT

One felt then that Petersen had lost and that it would be only a matter of time before the slow-footed German wore him down with heavy punches to the body. Before that round ended Petersen's left eyebrow was cut open. The old wound which had caused his only two defeats, once more seemed to be the vital factor.

One expected the end to come quickly when, in the fourth round, Neusel, who had been in the corner of the right eye. Both cuts were bleeding freely and for a few seconds the Welshman was completely blinded.

Then we saw how relentless the German could be. He opened his guard for Petersen to land a dozen punches in order to sink one himself to the body. But Neusel, though few suspected it, was himself in bad shape. And in the sixth round the fight swung round.

Petersen, fighting back grimly, suddenly sensed that Neusel was hurt and tired. The Welshman summoned his strength and fought like fury for a knockout. Yet in the seventh round Petersen was so weak that we hoped for the end to come quickly. He fought desperately, but his defence was gone. Neusel punished him with great severity and I half expected a towel to appear at the end of that round and again at the end of the eighth.

MOST DRAMATIC ROUND

Then came the most dramatic round of all. Neusel sagged again, and Petersen, having recovered his senses, fought as fiercely as his tired body would permit. His recovery was amazing, but it was his last effort. In the 10th round he could do nothing and Neusel in his turn summoned enough strength to settle the issue. The bell saved Petersen from being crunched to the floor.

Whether Mr. C. B. Thomas, the referee, would have stopped the fight in any event I cannot say. Neusel himself was so exhausted that the referee must have come to the conclusion that, so long as he could stand up, Petersen still had a chance of winning.

But the plucky Welshman was finished. He knew he would not last a minute, even if he managed to get up off his stool. The "slugging" match was over and it was settled solely by the superior strength and physique of the German.

After this magnificent exhibition of courage I am more convinced than ever that if Petersen were a stone heavier he would be among the world's best. A clever boxer might have given Neusel 18lb and beaten him, but Petersen is a fighter of only 13 stone.

Mr. Thomas, the referee, said to me after the fight: "Paul Damski, Neusel's manager, won the fight. Petersen put all he had into the ninth round. He did his utmost to knock out Neusel, but it was not enough."

"In the tenth round Petersen was thoroughly exhausted. Neusel, on the other hand, was still in good condition. He had recuperated well during the minute interval. Advised by Damski of his opponent's condition, he went in to finish the fight. He waded in, punching from all angles, and there you have the story. Petersen could not continue."

AN ENJOYABLE EVENING

A very successful Whist Drive and Tombola was held under the auspices of the Hong Kong Branch of the Royal Engineers Old Comrades Association in Wellington Barracks on Monday evening.

In spite of the very inclement weather, 20 tables were occupied, the event was not held in the open, as was originally intended, but in the Sappers Dining Room, and the attendance, augurs well for the future social events to be held by the Association.

Four prizes for Ladies and four for Gentlemen were very kindly presented to the winners by Mrs. Smith after which light refreshments were served and tombola started.

The next Whist Drive and Tombola will be held in Wellington Barracks, in the open air if possible, on Monday, August 29, commencing at 9 p.m. when it is hoped that all interested in the Association, and their friends will attend.

Holland's Rink In Semi-Final

A. M. Holland's rink composed of P. T. Farrell, R. Duncan, J. C. Brown entered the semi-final round of the Rink Competition of the Lawn Bowls Championship at the expense of M. J. Henderson's rink, when they defeated the latter quartette by 25 shots to 13 on the Recto greens yesterday.

A goodly crowd of spectators were present, but when the rain fell towards the end of the game, they all deserted the rink side for shelter elsewhere. The game was interrupted for some ten minutes, when it was continued on a heavy green.

Until the 13th head the game was evenly contested, then Holland's men got the upper hand and scored consistently to run away to a 25-11 lead at the 20th.

On the final head Henderson's team laid their woods for a two, for the game to terminate 25-13 in favour of their opponents.

The losers' rink was composed of the following:—D. W. Waterton, W. E. Haje, J. L. Tetley and M. J. Henderson (skip).

OVERY BEATS TACCHI

Seventeen heads sufficed for H. Overy to defeat C. J. Tacchi in the third Round of the Open Singles Lawn Bowls Championship, when he defeated the latter by 21 shots to 8, in a one-sided encounter on the Club de Retiro green yesterday.

At the 13th, where Overy led by 14 shots to 8, he went on to score a 2, 3, 2 and two singles to run up the necessary 21 shots. Tacchi on the other hand failed to score a single shot.

MACFARLANE WINS

Playing on the Kowloon Bowling Green Club yesterday in the Third Round, A. M. MacFarlane defeated P. E. Knight by 21 shots to 14. The winner scored a three on four occasions on the 5th, 12th, 17th and 20th heads, while his opponent laid three of his woods only on one occasion at the 3rd head.

Until the 11th head, Knight led by a single shot, but from then onwards MacFarlane steadily increased his lead, to put the result beyond doubt with a three at the 17th and on 20th heads.

WIN FOR CULLEN

On the Craigengower C.C. ground, F. Cullen beat F. J. Jones in the Third Round of the Open Singles by 21 shots to 11. The game went to 22 heads.

THE NEW COTTON

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 2

The eyes of the sporting world are focused on Henry Cotton. When at the last hole on Wednesday, needing a four to beat the 67 made on this course by Walter Hagen, he took six, and walked off the green smiling.

This smile represents an outlook on life that has changed diametrically during the last twelve months. In a two-hour talk Cotton outlined this change to me in detail (says Henry Longhurst).

"I do not take the game so seriously as I did," he said. "Life is too short. There are too many other things besides golf. Why, I remember the days when I would not drive my car to the course for fear of shaking my arms"—though I noticed that he drove up in a friend's car to-day.

"I did not even drink tea or coffee till I was 23. My nerves used to get strung up to such an extent that I could not digest any food during a tournament. That is what happened to me in the last round of this Championship last year."

MUCH BETTER GOLFER

"Now I can eat what I like, when I like. I drive my car to the course and I do all the odd jobs on it myself."

"I hope to win this title again, and I shall do my best to do so. If I do not, then I shall not take it too hard. I shall drive quietly home, play an exhibition match on the way, which will bring me in perhaps £25, and then go back to Belgium, where I am as happy as I have ever been in my life."

A year or two ago if Cotton had taken six on that last hole he would have looked as black as thunder and probably hit himself on the head with his club—a popular way that he had of expressing his annoyance.

Now he smiles—and the result is that he is not only a happier man but a much better golfer. "Life is too short" might be the motto for some of our other sporting stars.

Bad Beating For The Giants

New York, July 15. A severe trouncing was meted out to the New York Giants baseball team in the National League to-day when they encountered the Cincinnati Reds.

The leaders scored six runs from 14 hits but their opponents chalked up 18 runs from 18 hits. The Giants, however, have a commanding lead over the other teams, even though their defeat has allowed the Cardinals to creep up somewhat.

Only one match was scheduled in the American League, this being between the Browns and Senators, the former winning by the odd run in five.

Results, as cabled by Reuter, follow:

BOROTRA NAMES HIS SECONDS

Challenge To Duel Accepted

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 2

Jean Borotra, the popular French tennis player, announced on Wednesday night that he has nominated his seconds for the duel to which he has been challenged.

Shortly after losing his dramatic match at Wimbledon with Menzel he received by registered letter the challenge from M. Didier Poulain, tennis player, announced on Wednesday, "L'Auto." Thereafter he stated:

"In accordance with the usual procedure provided by the French Code of Honour, I have consequently asked two of my friends, Gen. Alvin, Grand Officer de la Legion d'Honneur, former Commander of the Ecole Polytechnique, and M. Rene Lacoste, captain of the French Davis Cup team, to act as my seconds, and to get in touch with M. Poulain's seconds."

"His seconds are M. Jean Joseph Renaud, the well-known fencer, and M. Jacques Goddet, co-director of 'L'Auto.' The acceptance of the challenge was sent by registered letter to M. Poulain's seconds. 'I have now washed my hands of the whole affair,' Borotra added. 'It now concerns the four seconds.'"

M. Poulain is a famous swordsman, and Borotra has not fenced much of late. "Only a few times in the last ten years," he said "but, as I suppose, I should have choice of weapons, I might choose pistols."

PEIPING TENNIS STARS

Defeated In Nanking

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright))

Nanking, July 8.

During the week-end, in one of most exciting inter-city tennis tournaments of the season, the Peiping tennis team, composed of Tsinghua and Yenching varsity stars, went down in defeat at the hands of the Amateur Tennis Club by 4 matches to 2.

The Peiping players were Chu Mu-Hsiang, Lo Hsiao-Chao, Lo Hsiao-Chien and Lin Hsiu-Chuan. On Saturday, the local players made a clean sweep of all the three matches. Yu Chih-Chung disposed of Chu in the first singles by two straight sets, 6-6, 6-3. In the second singles, Ma Shao-Po easily defeated Lo Hsiao-Chien in two straight, 6-2, 6-2, and in the doubles Liang Teh-Kwang and Yu Chih-Chung won over Chu and Lin after three gruelling sets, 6-3, 3-6 and 6-3.

Out of the three remaining matches played yesterday, the local team won one and lost two, making the total score of 4 matches to 2 for the two-day series in favour of Nanking.

Liang (Nanking) triumphed over Lo Hsiao-Chao in one of the closest contests seen on local courts this season, the match going to three sets, Liang won by 7-5, 3-6 and 7-5.

WHITCOMBE DISPLACES COTTON

Padgham Scorns The Wind

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29.

The 10,000 crowd which surged over Muirfield yesterday saw Henry Cotton, Champion and favourite, displaced, from his leadership of the field by Charles Whitcombe, whose 68 put him three strokes ahead. Cotton, tight-lipped and stern-eyed, battled round in 74, which makes him joint second with Alf Padgham, writes a correspondent.

Between the two leaders, and their nearest American rivals there is a solid wedge of British professionals—Branch, Perry, Kenyon, and the young Scot, Laidlaw, as well as the leading amateur, R. Sweeney, who is an Anglo-American. The qualifying aggregate, remarkably low considering the conditions, was 153, and 61 players will embark on the two testing final rounds to-day.

A fancied player who just scraped into the short list was Syd Brews. Jack McLean and Hector Thomson qualified with a couple of strokes to spare, and are now only two shots behind Eric McRuvie.

Henry Picard heads the Americans, and it must be recognised that with an aggregate of 149—six shots behind Whitcombe—he is not yet out of the running. "Mac" Smith, who collapsed yesterday, is bracketed with Lawson Little at 146.

Whitcombe's was a curious uneventful round. He had to play only one shot from the rough, and he steered clear of all Muirfield's dreaded bunkers until he came to the last hole, where he was trapped on the edge of the green. Here is his card:

Out—4 3 3 3 4 5 3 4 4—33

In—4 4 4 4 4 3 5 4—35—68

The secret of his low score was the perfection of his second shots. A stiff breeze from the west had made the conditions entirely unlike those of the first three days, and he showed excellent judgment in allowing for its vagaries.

At the second and third holes, where his seconds rolled up beside the pin, he gave us an indication of what we might expect. He did nothing spectacular on the outward half, but only one of his shots was not played according to book, a brassie which he ran through the green into the rough at the sixth.

He told me that the ninth (490 yards) was the hole that pleased him most in his round. He had reason to be satisfied, for very few players covered its 490 yards in two shots, and the wind tended to sweep seconds into the treacherous wall on the left.

At the fourteenth, where he had to smash his shots into the wind, he did not scruple to take a driver for his second, and that unorthodox choice was justified by the result.

BALL HITS SPECTATOR

When he came to the seventeenth he required a brace of 4's to shatter Cotton's record. His drive was slightly cut, and he required a spoon for his second. The ball duly landed on the green, but he was left with a longish putt. His run-up was two yards short, and his putt for 4 struck the back of the hole and stayed out. The crowd sighed its disappointment.

Dense throngs waited for Whitcombe round the last green; and it was a run, through the ropes after he had played his second that prevented his ball from finishing in the rough. It bounded through the middle of the crowd and ricocheted from a man's shoulder into the bunker.

With his habitual calm he whipped the ball from the sand, removed it while his partner putted, and then ran it down for his 4.

Half an hour earlier W. Cox, the dark-haired big-shouldered Addington professional, had handed in a card of 69, which might easily have been 85. Details:—

Out—5 3 3 4 4 3 3 5—34

In—4 4 3 5 5 3 3 4—35—69

He missed no fewer than four putts of a yard, but, on the other hand, he laid his seconds hard up against the pin at the second, third, eighth, and seventeenth. He lipped the hole for another "birdie" at the tenth, and just missed his 2 from five feet at the short sixteenth.

Cotton's comparative failure was a big disappointment to the enormous crowd he took out with him. At the first and last holes the fairway was lined from tee to green. Notwithstanding the size of his gallery, he went round playing all his shots with characteristic swiftness in rather less than three hours.

Right from the start it was evident that he would have to pull out all his reserves to get the better of the wind. He got the worst of the weather for a gale was blowing up when he went out, and there was a threat of renewed rain.

He had a struggle to get his 4 at the first hole, where he rammed down an eight-yarder after finding a bunker with his second, and that struggle continued for the rest of the round.

Here and there he produced a masterly shot. An iron covered the pin at the second, and another laid his ball "dead" at the seventh.

But the farther he went the worse grew his tendency to hook, and even on the greens he developed a curious little curl with his putter.

He had three putts at two successive holes, and just scraped a 5 at the long and difficult ninth after again catching a bunker with his second. On paper his outward half of 35 was a good achievement.

PUTTING LAPSES

Coming back, he found it more difficult to get his figures. Fives went down on his card at the tenth and twelfth, where he was bunkered, and he dropped another stroke at the fourteenth, where he pulled a chip and failed to get down from two yards.

A 2 at the sixteenth would have been useful, and he had a putt of three yards for it. But the inspiration had gone out of his golf, and he could not get the ball to drop. On the next green he took three putts.

His drive between the hedges of spectators at the eighteenth tailed off into a bunker. He recovered well enough, and stopped a running chip two feet from the pin.

Without hesitation he addressed himself to the putt—and missed. He stood rigid for a moment as though unable to believe that he had failed, then shook his head and walked with expressionless face from the green.

NOT A BAD HOLE

Though he has played no spectacular golf, Padgham is shaping like a potential champion. He scorned the wind yesterday and had not a bad hole in his round. He was one of the few who got a 4 at the ninth, and he had "birdie" 3's at the tenth and eleventh.

From a Scottish point of view, the most encouraging figure on the score-board was Laidlaw's 71. This lanky Perth youth has come right to the forefront since he went as assistant professional to a club in Surrey.

No one was hitting the ball farther in yesterday's wind. At the first hole he planked an iron shot in the middle of the green and then missed his 4 through taking three putts. He holed only one long putt in the round—a three-yarder at the second. The worst figure on his card was a 6 at the fourteenth, where he cut his drive and found a bunker in a vain attempt to play for safety.

He was greatly helped by his deadly pitching at the four short holes, which he negotiated in 10 strokes.

"MAC" SMITH FALTERS

I joined the throng of sympathisers round "Mac" Smith, who appears to have lost his chance of a title once again with a return of 77. His iron shots were so loosely struck that only once, at the eighth, did he catch the green with his second.

The other Americans fared better. Henry Picard, no longer the mysterious, and now revealed as a good but not brilliant golfer, returned a careful 73, which included an inward half of 34. He holed an eight-yarder at the eleventh for 3 and picked up a 2 at the sixteenth.

"Texas Joe," as the irrepressible Ezar is nicknamed, laughed and

HERR HITLER'S BURDEN

Germany's Internal Debts

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, June 29.

From a source of exceptional reliability I learn that the internal finances of Germany are causing much more anxiety to the authorities than the public is allowed to know, writes a correspondent.

The unfunded internal debt for rearmament, and for Hitler's schemes, including new motor-roads, to fight unemployment, has now reached a figure equivalent to £1,800,000,000 at the present rate of exchange.

The Budget of the Air Ministry alone for the current year has been overstepped by £58,000,000.

The Budget of the Air Ministry alone for the current year has been overstepped by £58,000,000.

When called to order for this extravagance by Dr. Schacht and the Finance Minister, General Goering replied that the financial side of his Ministry was not his business and did not worry him in the least.

RIBBENTROP RISING

Meanwhile, in order to bolster up their shattered self-confidence, the Nazis are making great capital out of the political success of the Anglo-German naval agreement.

The effect has been to increase enormously the prestige of Herr von Ribbentrop, and his further advancement is considered inevitable.

The German Foreign Office is being relegated more and more into the background. Baron von Neurath no longer counts for anything, and does not even dare to appoint new Ambassadors and Ministers to the seven diplomatic posts that are now vacant. There may be more vacancies shortly.

The position of Herr von Hoersch, the German Ambassador in London, is also the subject of much discussion. Those in the know are drawing conclusions from the fact that, contrary to diplomatic custom, he did not accompany Sir John Simon on his Berlin visit, and was not asked to sign the London agreement with Herr von Ribbentrop.

"wise-cracked" round the course in 75. With his usual flair for stage management, he kept one of his snappiest putts for the last green, and threw up his arms in response to the crowd's cheers when it vanished into the cup.

I like the modesty of these Americans. Not long after he had come in with a 71, Lawson Little was not taking lessons from George Duncan.

He was much happier yesterday with all his clubs, and at last he seems to have found his touch with his putter. Anyway, he rolled in some useful ones from the crucial distance of two yards. But it has to be recorded that he missed a putt of a yard at the sixteenth and another of 18 inches at the seventeenth.

Little gave an impressive demonstration of the power he puts behind his strokes when he took a No. 1 iron from the tee at the ninth (490 yards), and smacked the ball farther than most men reached with their drives. He followed that with a terrific brassie shot against the wind, and narrowly failed to get down from three yards for an "eagle" 3.

BEATEN BY WIND

The first man to break 70 yesterday was Aubrey Boomer, and in returning 69 he gave a quaint demonstration of how to hole and miss putts. He had three putts on four greens, but he ran down four putts from three to eight yards on the inward half. An eight-yarder on the last green made a fitting climax to his round.

Details:—

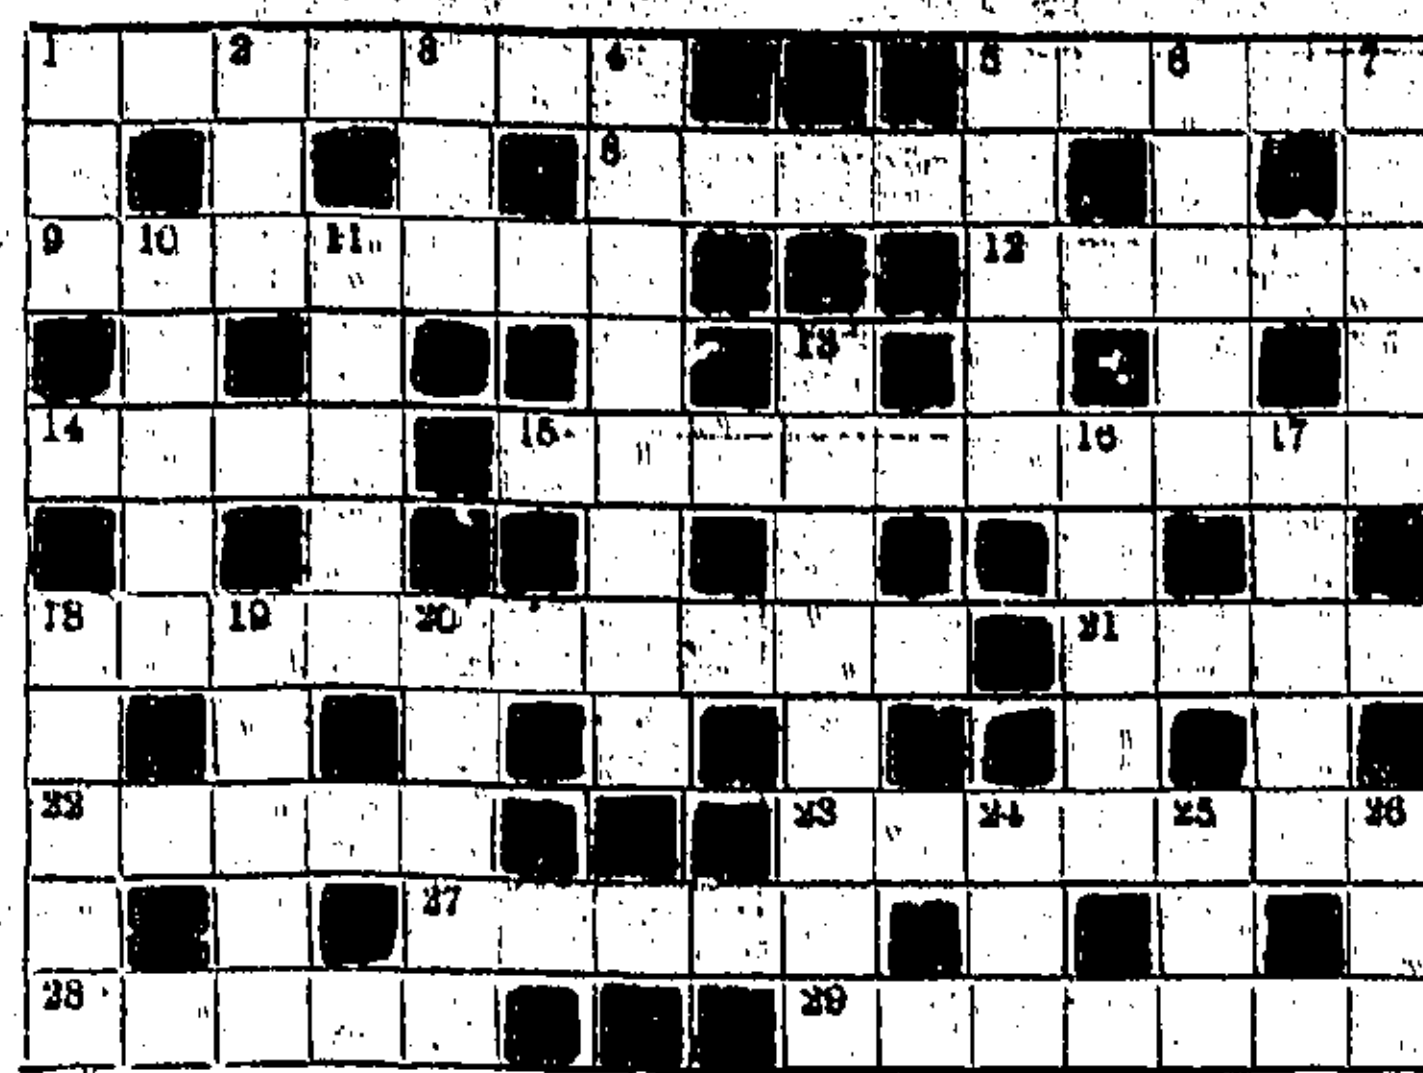

Out—3 4 4 4 5 4 3 3 5—35

In—5 3 4 3 5 3 3 3 5—34—69

The wind played havoc with many cards, and one of the notables who crashed was Eric McRuvie. He never recovered from a shattering experience at the first hole, where he was in two bunkers, and then required four putts—total 7. The last hole cost him 6, and his aggregate of 149 put him four strokes behind Sweeney, the curly-haired Anglo-American, who had returned a 73.

Paddy Mahon, McRuvie's partner and another of the low scorers in the first round, also blew up and required 79. A Perry who was one stroke behind Cotton on Wednesday, lost his place with a round of 75.

THEIR SILVER JUBILEE
Malay Volunteers Celebrate

Singapore, July 16.

The volunteer Drill Hall in Beach Road was filled yesterday with over 300 people, including His Excellency the Governor and Lady Thomas, as guests of "F" (Malay) Company, Singapore Volunteer Corps, who were celebrating the silver jubilee anniversary of their formation.

Twenty-five years ago, General French inquired of Major-General Perrott, C.B., the then General Officer Commanding the Troops, Malaya, what reason he could give the War Office why there were no Malay volunteers in the country—Malays being considered in England to be a fighting race.

An answer was provided. No reason was given but within a month 60 Malays enrolled, and the great keenness and aptitude which animated these men who were desirous of "proving to His Majesty the King—and to the Empire—that the Malays of Singapore were willing to take their part in defending the nation," was reflected yesterday in the selected number of Volunteers who provided a smart guard of honour.

This comprised 80 officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Company, under the command of Lieut. Mohamed Hassan, with 2nd Lieut. Abdul Kadir carrying the King's Colours.

INTERESTING EXPERIENCE

Sharp at five o'clock, His Excellency arrived and was met by Lieut. Col. Fink, Lieut. Col. Donald G. MacLeod (Officer Commanding 2nd Battalion, S.S.V.F.) and Capt. N. E. B. Graburn (Officer Commanding the Malay Company).

His Excellency received the Royal salute and inspected the guard.

The others whom the Governor met and with whom he shook hands and had a few moments' conversation were Capt. N. M. Hashim and Mr. E. E. Colman (two of the four founders of the Company), Capt. Haji Abbas bin Omar, Capt. Abubakar bin Haji Arshad, M.B.E., Capt. D. C. Waterston, (second in command of the Company), and Imam Haji Moosa, the oldest Imam in Singapore.

COLOURS DISPLAYED

The Governor then took his seat on the dais, and shortly afterwards gave permission to the guard commander, Lieut. Mohamed Hassan, for the guard to march off. The Guard was played off parade to the tune of the S.V.C. march, "In Oriente Primus."

Following the guard's departure with the J.M.F. band, the Governor and the official guests led the way to the main hall of the headquarters, where tea was served.

An interesting ceremony took place during the tea when the King's Colours and the Corps Colours were brought into the hall and displayed over "squashed" rifles.

CAPT. GRABURN'S SPEECH

A short speech on the celebration of the anniversary was made by Capt. Graburn, who said the company had formerly been known as the Malay Company Singapore Volunteer Infantry.

He referred to the admirably compiled souvenir—one of which had been handed to each guest—containing the 25 years' history of the Company, written in English and in Malay.

He went on:

"The souvenir will tell you that the original volunteers of 1910 were animated with a desire to prove to His Majesty the King, and the Empire, that the Malays of Singapore were ready and willing to take their part in defending the nation, and to make sacrifices that good and courageous men are ever willing and ready to make in a good cause."

"I feel sure that that spirit is still strong among our young men of to-day, and their country calls to them to train."

"Some of our earlier members have passed on; and others have retired from the active list owing to advancing age. Of the original 60 only two now remain Colour Service members."

"To such of our retired members as are present to-day the Company says: Though retired from the active list you are still on duty, teach the younger generation to follow in your footsteps, tell them, explain to them—that a young man who expects other people to defend him or his country is no credit to either. We have a few vacancies; fill up our ranks."

VITAL EMPIRE OUTPOST

"This is a vital outpost of the Empire and the Volunteers of Malaya occupy the very unusual distinction of being first line troops, and as such they must be ever ready to take their place immediately danger threatens alongside their Regular brothers in arms in the defence of this Colony. This means a high standard of training and also self-sacrifice. In that task, should they ever be called upon to do so, I feel confident that they will uphold the honour of the local forces in this Colony."

Concluding, Captain Graburn thanked a member of the Malay Volunteer Club for the time and immense trouble he had taken in collecting and verifying the statistics in the souvenir. He also thanked Capt. Noor Mohamed Hashim for translating the souvenir into Malay language and script in Kuala Lumpur.

Capt. Hashim had been one of the founders and had served in the Company as an officer for some years. He still lived for the Company and gave them the benefit of his great experience and valuable advice whenever it was required.

Capt. Graburn thanked H.H. the Sultan of Johore for generally permitting the band of the Johore Military Forces to be present.

There were others, said Capt. Graburn, who had done much to help the Company and he thanked them publicly. They had assured him that being of shy and retiring dispositions they preferred their names to remain unknown. Their help was greatly appreciated by the Company.

entrusted with the bowling, the latter coming on for the first time in this innings.

Mitchell was bowled by Hammond, the ball shooting into the wicket off his pads after he had scored 58 runs, 111 for 4. Mitchell played with untiring patience and hit seven boundaries, batting for two and three quarters hours. Wade at this stage had not increased his score of four.

CAMERON IN

The proceedings were greatly enlivened with the arrival of Cameron, who proceeded to hit out indiscriminately at everything without any effective contact, and was mildly rebuked by dumb signs when Wade refused to run an easy single. Cameron continued to pursue his bold policy.

BATSMEN TEMPTED

Bowes purposely gave many scoring chances in order to get Cameron opposite to him, but Wade persuaded his partner not to be taken in, and by refusing to run although the ball travelled more than 30 yards on two occasions. After that Cameron hit out freely again, and was beguiled into stepping out when Barber dislodged his balls.

Cameron's score was 49 and Wade's contribution 32 not out. Mr. "Extras" 20, bringing the total score to 194 for 5 wickets when the match was declared drawn.

NEW BILL EXPLAINED

Washington, July 15.
Defending the proposed bill blocking damage suits against the Government, arising out of the abrogation of the gold clause, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, has written a letter to Senator Fletcher, Chairman of the Senate Banking Committee.

Mr. Morgenthau said that he could not see how the proposed bill could have any noticeable effect on the Government's credit or upon the prices of Government bonds.

He declared there had been no weakness in the Government bond market; since the bill was proposed and moreover there was no implication of any intent to avoid paying the principal and interest on Government bonds in full.

JAPANESE GOODS IN SIAM

(Special Air Mail Service).

London, July 2.
The Department of Overseas Trade publishes a report on economic conditions in Siam. The preponderance of Japanese goods in the import market is the most remarkable feature, the general explanation being that the cheapness of goods from Japan has provided an important means of compensation to Siam for her loss of buying power during the period of depression. The cotton textile market is now almost entirely in Japanese hands. Japanese activity has become greater in the majority of the other branches of the import trade.

MARKED CHANGES

The ever-increasing trade in Japanese goods has led also to marked changes in distribution arrangements. Many British and other European houses have given up the import of all textiles and have only a very small share in any branch of the Japanese import business, which is carried on direct through local dealers or through Japanese importing houses. The tone of the market has, however, greatly improved in the last few months, and even to European importing houses the outlook seems brighter. After the crop of failures two years ago business was conducted with greater caution, and there have been very few failures during the past year. It is likely, however, that Japan will reap the greatest benefit from improvements. Even if better conditions continue European goods will be driven from the open market more and more, and importers of European manufactures will have to confine themselves to the sale of "branded" and a limited number of specialties, as indeed some have already done.
